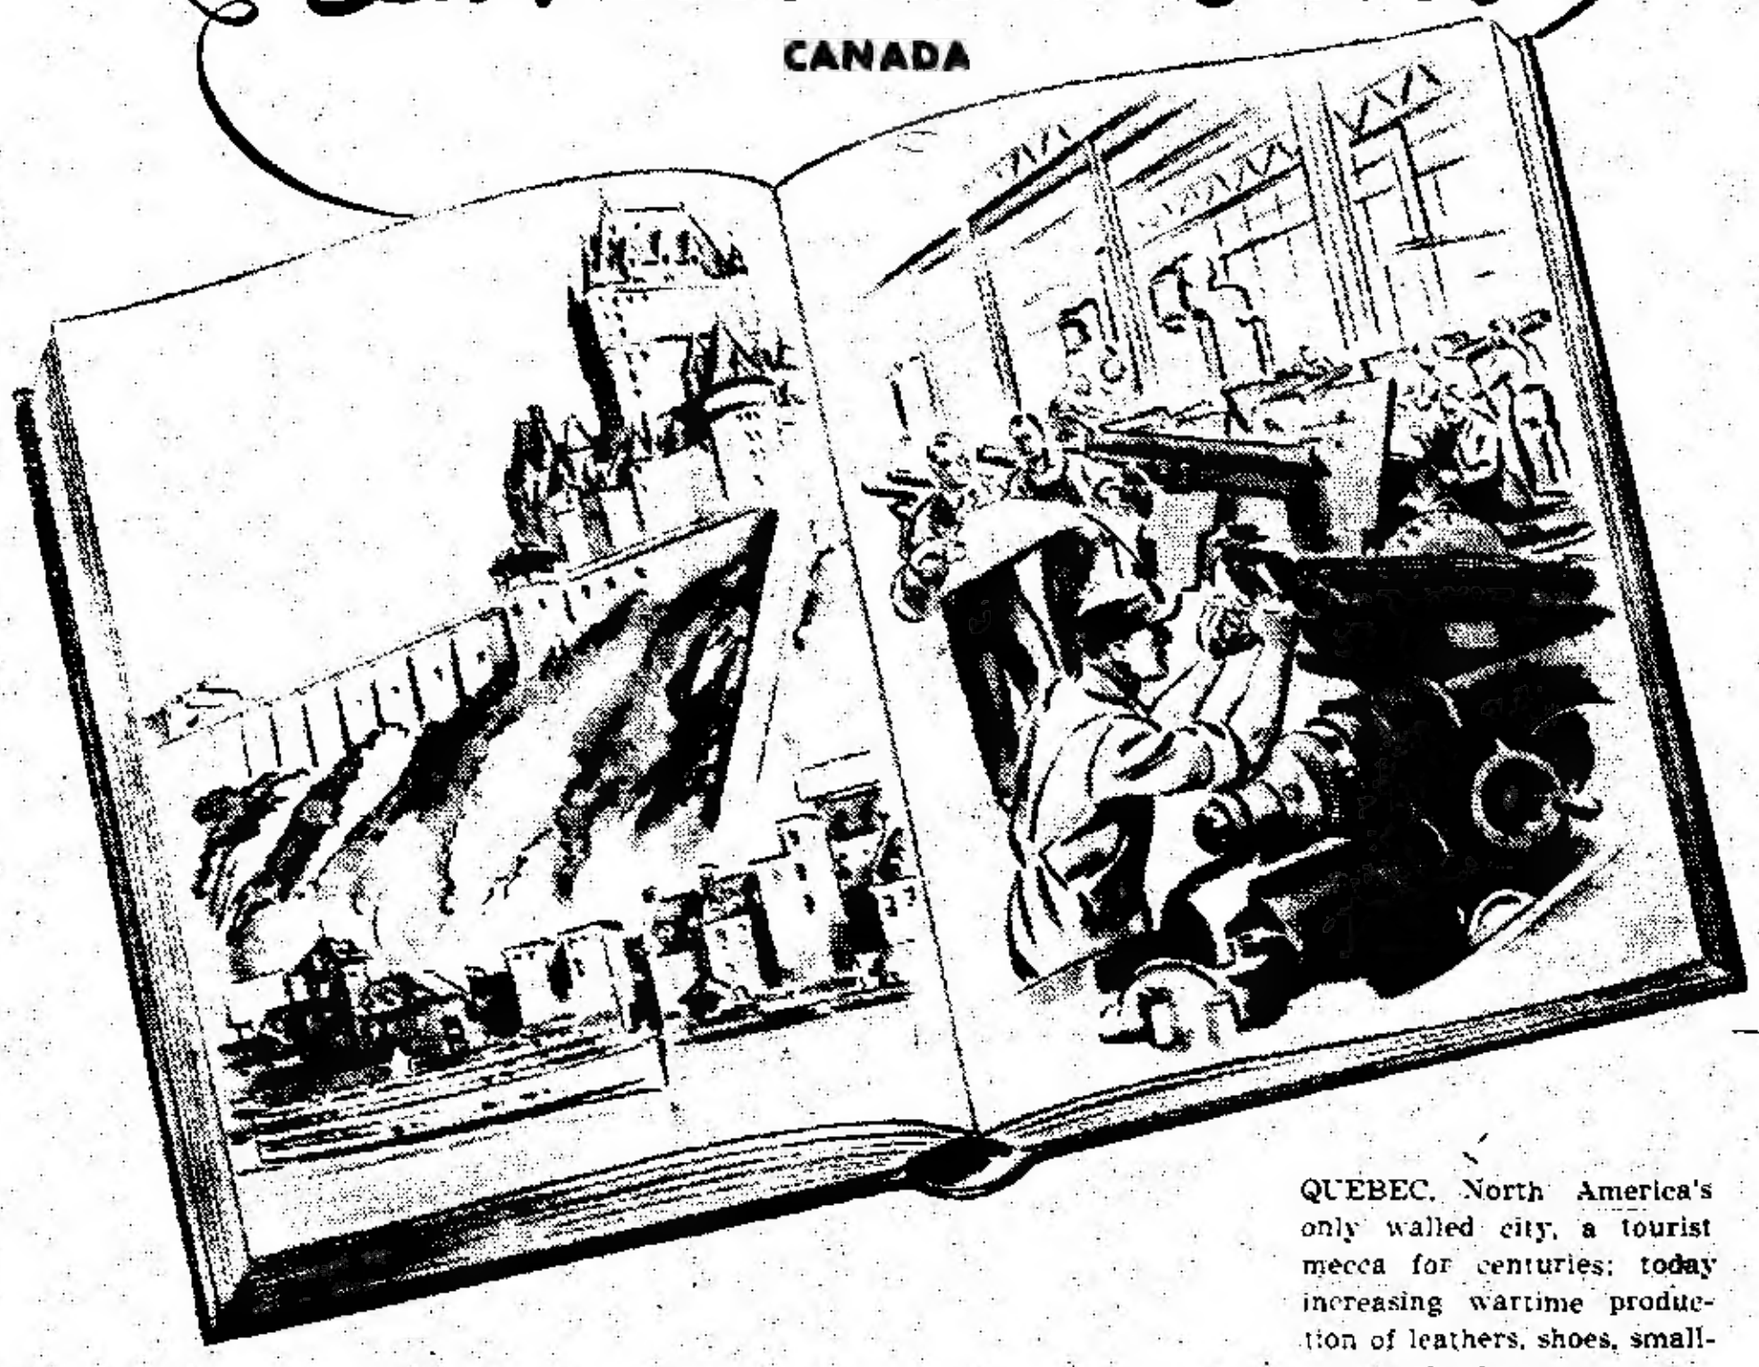
La Province de Québec

CANADA



QUEBEC, North America's only walled city, a tourist mecca for centuries; today increasing wartime production of leathers, shoes, small-arms and other many essential war-materials.

Embattled Québec . . . this storied city of Old World sights and sounds . . . like every section of La Province de Québec, is familiar today as never before to thousands of young Canadians — wartime travellers in uniform!

Many of these welcome guests are posted here . . . while others, like our own boys from this Province, are undergoing intensive training for immediate service overseas.

Men from La Province de Québec, together with men from every part of Canada, are fighting on the world's battlefronts — at sea, on land, and in the air. Civilian populations at home are doing their full share, too, on the production lines. Our people are making ammunition . . . heavy bombs . . . small arms, tanks, aircraft, and ships.

Today, we in La Province de Québec would wish to meet more and more friends from our sister-provinces. But, because we know that wartime travel is not easy, we extend our invitation for after Victory; "Come to La Province de Québec when the war is won!"

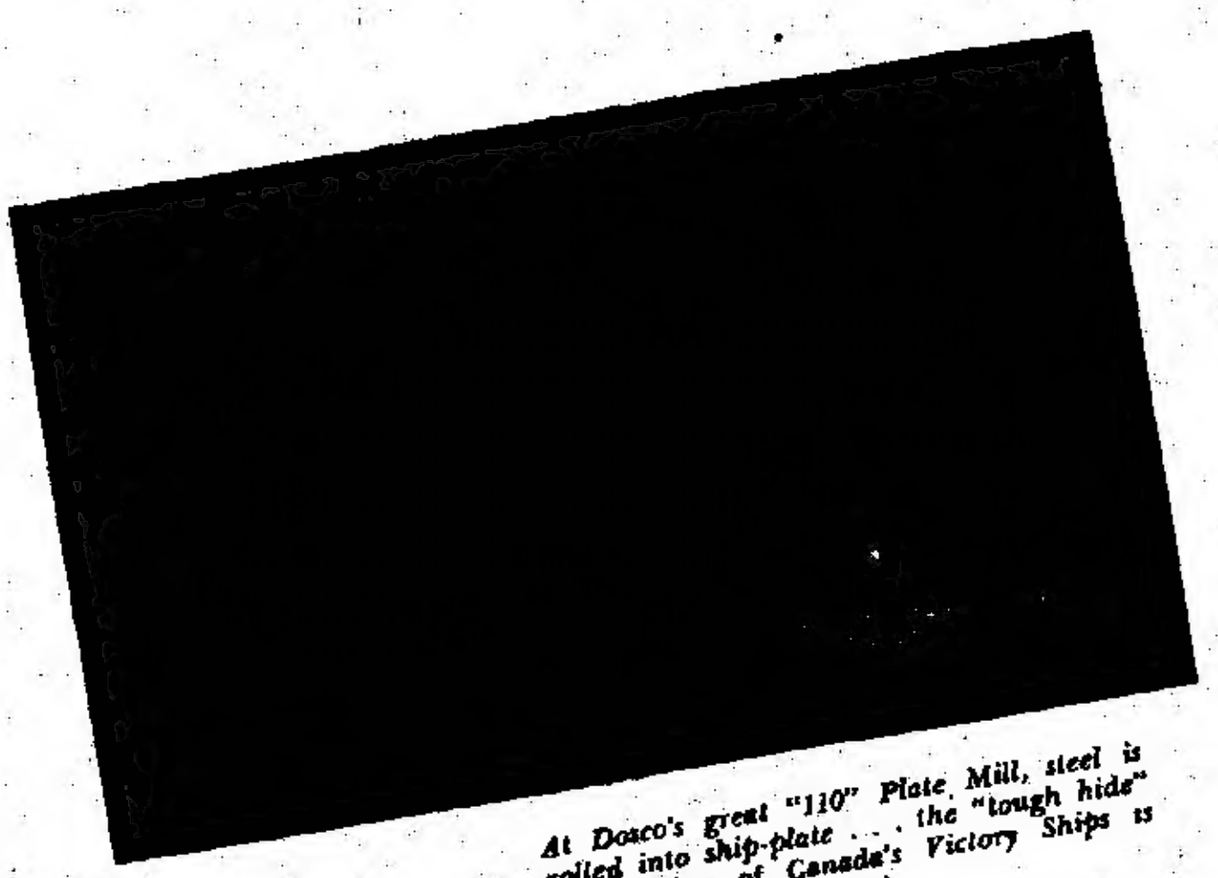
YES! STEEL MUST FLOAT...



At Dosco's great "110" Plate Mill, steel is rolled into ship-plate . . . the "tough hide" for another of Canada's Victory Ships is born!

SHIPS are still the key to Victory! A flood of war matériel streams from United Nations production lines . . . a seemingly irresistible tide of tanks, planes and guns rolls forth. Vital, yes! Yet . . . of what avail if steel-hulled ships are not standing by to deliver the weapons? Without ships to carry the flood to our far-flung fighting forces, a mighty torrent of striking power is dammed to the merest trickle. For these ships, so vital in maintaining our life line, Dosco provides the tough hide of hardened steel . . . Ship-plate! Steel that will float our machines of war across the seven seas! Other war matériel comes within the scope of Dosco's vast resources — including destroyers, gun-mountings and shells — but none can be of greater import than the tons of ship-plate rolled forth daily. It is the steel that MUST float us on . . . to Victory!

Commentaries

By Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi

A Rosh Hashonah Creed — 5704

Do you recall the benediction pronounced in the pious Jewish home around the festive board following the custom of dipping apple in honey—symbols of fruitful endeavour and sweetness on the New Year Eve? It is a prayer which with great anticipation we can usher in the year 5704. "Yehi Rotzon Milefonecho Adenoy Elohenu Velohe Avosenu Shetechadesh Alenu Shino Tovo U-Mesuko—May it be Thy will, O Lord our God and God of our Fathers, to renew unto us a happy and pleasant year."

Though humanity stands in this hour at the crossroads of history there are many signs indicating that the new year will bring to a war-ridden world much that will be pleasant —victory and peace. For such a time as this Rosh Hashonah 5704 provides us with a creed.

The first article in this creed is to behold God in life's victories. During the past four years so many among us turned to God in the trials and extremities of life. Religion was a matter of last resort. Soldiers in the fox holes, fighting for life, could hardly be atheists. We have read of castaways on rubber rafts who "thought they heard the angels sing." We read of navigators of shell-swept skies who have discovered that God is their co-Pilot.

We do not doubt the sincerity of all those who find God thus. We have appreciation even for those who became aware of Divine Providence—by negation, questioning the whereabout of a God in the world who could permit such a global catastrophe as this war. God was only remembered to be blamed. But they who whined about God and they who found God in the extremities of life must especially now seek God and find Him in the mounting victories for the cause of human freedom and human liberation.

We, the constant and normal followers of religion, knew that God was at work. That the God of history has ever brought destruction to men of wickedness and men of evil. The great refrain of the Jewish liturgy is that of Adenoy Melech, God, the Righteous King, judging all mankind; that His is Dominion and Power and it is He who makes "the reign of wickedness to vanish like smoke."

Let us affirm our faith in God Who is now driving the Fascists and Nazi leaders and their followers to doom and destruction. Let us behold God not only in the struggles of life but in life's glorious victories. We should learn in the spirit of the Rosh Hashonah tradition thus to pray: "Lord of the Universe, in joy and in grief, in comfort and in pain, in peace and in war, we adore Thee, Everlasting God." And let us above all behold the work of God in our joys and victories and our achievements.

And the second article in the Rosh Hashonah creed is the preachment of the global view of life. Long before Mr. Willkie's "One World" the Jew has ever prayed on the new year not only for himself and for his own people but for all the world. The theme of the High Holyday liturgy is that of universalism and world brotherhood. Rosh Hashonah, according to our teaching, marks the birthday of man, not the birth of the Jew, but man, every man and all men. On this holy day our tradition affirms that not only does the Jew stand in judgment but Kol Boei Olam — all the inhabitants of the world.

We welcome this revolutionary period in history where not only the world has contracted physically. We can indeed fly in sixty hours to anywhere. But we are convinced of the spiritual neighbourliness that is bound to be the by-product of the present struggle — that neighbourliness emphasizing the interdependence of all peoples. A new day has come to dispel the darkness of tyranny and wrong. New forces of light and liberty are breaking upon the world and making us conscious of our fraternal obligation to every man and every nation and every people.

They who know not Judaism have in their ignorance spoken of it as a tribal faith. But Judaism has ever demanded of its adherents an outlook universal. Thus there is the old Jewish legend that before a babe is born, an angel appears before him in his mother's womb, holds a lamp before the babe's eyes, and shows him the world — from one end of the world to the other.

The liturgy of Rosh Hashonah emphasizes "Hayom Haras Olom"—that the new year marks the birthday of the world. Surely the Jewish people, because of its cosmic tradition, is the only people which observes the birthday of the world. The oneness of mankind spiritually will yet be established. Mankind will have to undergo a process of re-education and learn that even as God is one so are the children of mankind one human family. The global view of life which calls for sharing and working together among peoples of all races and creeds constitutes the hope of civilization.

And Rosh Hashonah awakens within us the sense of beauty. In a world of so much ugliness and destruction it is good to gather in the sanctuary and read the Piyutim, the poetry of the Machzor. What spiritual joy and edification are to be found in our ancient liturgy repeated by generations of Jews through the centuries! And how uplifting are the High Holyday musical chants of the synagogue! What a mystical exultation the melodies of the synagogue can give us if only we have not been dulled by the din and noise of the world's madness. We are so much in need now as reinforcements of faith of the poetry and music of the sanctuary.

Rosh Hashonah also helps us to develop the sense of heroism. Religion ever emphasizes the heroic and that of courage. On the New Year, the day of "Zikaron" we recall the heroes, the sages, and the martyrs who gave all to transmit to us of the present generation the priceless heritage of Judaism. This heritage offers teachings and doctrines upon which hinges the salvation of humanity. We must continue

every friday

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancor
That for what it cost me to be free
I might have had an anchor."

The prophet Amos asked: "Shall a Shofar be blown in the city and the people not be stirred?" Not on Rosh Hashonah, the Day of the Blowing of the Horn. This is not a carefree holiday, this is the reverberating anniversary of the creation of the world. Remember that even the angels in heaven tremble on these days of awe when the Heavenly Father passes judgment on every creature.

By divine decree every possible misfortune may befall the erring human except for the repentance, prayers, and charity with which God's mercy may be engaged to set aside the sentence. The sound of the horn is a call to the world for noble resolve and action thereon for Rosh Hashonah is a holiday that looks to the time when all men will form one band to do the divine will.

The blowing of the horn symbolizes the warnings of the prophets against a world of injustice and inequalities and for a world of brotherhood and peace. To Maimonides the blasts of the horn meant: "Wake up, you who are asleep, wake up you who are enslumbered!" This means all the inhabitants of the earth, not just the Jews.

It is a custom at New Year's to dip a piece of bread in honey at the beginning of every meal during the holy day season to symbolize the hope that the coming year will be a sweet one, and also as an inspiring reminder of the efforts in righteousness which are required to secure a heavenly decree of such a favorable nature. The eating of a new fruit, one that ripened in the preceding season and has not been tasted until now is symbolic of the fact that New Year's is the season of renewal of hopes and aspirations.

This year the Jews do not need to resort to symbols for a certain rise in hope. Hope is in the air and anyone is justified in hearing its strains coming from the ram's horn. There is more light and it is brighter for the first New Year's of many because the evil hands stretched out to break up vital human values are being stayed. Each year for ten years the gloom has deepened while mankind was being more and more degraded and while wanton ferocity mounted higher and higher to an insaner pitch.

Over three million Jews have been destroyed since Hitler went to war, of over eight million in Europe. The shrinkage, the despoliation, the destruction, the searing effects of terror of all kinds have been frightful and there are more losses to come. But nearly two million Jews did find asylum in Russia and many thousands in other countries, and three millions do still remain. The thing is that many got away, eluded the talons, and still live; that the land which cradled Fascism has broken from its bestial partner; and that there are signs of the Nazi-Fascist movement spending itself rather than expanding with an accretion of strength.

However, with the Jews hope does not have to appear. It is always there, a Jewish dogma of faith. It is weaker, it is stronger, but it is always there. When there are no immediate reasons for it, the Jews find it in their past performances of the will to live in the face of other persecutions. They do not need to be sustained by exciting thoughts of vengeance. They maintain confidence by reviewing the exercise of their own powers of adaptibility in the past. They have been resilient for too long to lose heart now.

The Jews have been flung into exile across the surface of the earth. Many of these people have been lost and unhappy so far from their homes and accustomed ways. But this kind of thing has gone on for centuries and to some purpose for the dispersion is thus too vast for any exterminationist policy to envelop all the Jews. There are always distant saving remnants that keep outposts of hope alive for the very reason that there have been eras of exile and migration. The fact that this time it was harder to get away and harder to find another home than at any time before and that many got through just the same, should encourge the Jews to believe that what they ever had to do before and did they can do now if they have to.

Rosh Hashonah, the Jewish New Year's, looks with steadfast heart toward that better day for which the Jews labor and wait. The sound of the shofar warns the leaders of darkness that they are foredoomed to fail, that the world in the long run refuses to turn its face away from the course the Jews stand for, leading to human fellowship and understanding. The Jews wish each other a happy new year. "May you be inscribed and sealed for a good year." But the holiday is for all God's children to whom Israel gave its eternal principles for the freedom of the human spirit. f.f.c.

A New Year Message

By Samuel Bronfman, Of Montreal, President Of The Canadian Jewish Congress

Four years of trial and tribulation have passed since first we girded ourselves for battle against the enemies of mankind. Vividly do we recall that then, as the opening of hostilities found us in the midst of our Holy Days, it was to the intonation of our prayers and with the sanctity of our devotions that we pledged ourselves to the greatest and holiest cause of our age.

Samuel Bronfman, Montreal, President, Canadian Jewish Congress

In the fulfilment of that pledge, Canadian Jewry, has not for a moment flinched or faltered. While the darkest hours in history descended upon us, our belief in the invincible might of right never wavered. Under the inspiration of our great leaders, and shoulder to shoulder with the citizens of all of the United Nations, we braved the storm of our initial adversity.

Now, the tide of battle has turned. The first instalments towards the complete victory have been accorded to the forces of democracy. The Nazi hordes, once almost at the gates of Palestine, have been chased out of Africa. Once on the verge of enslaving the Russian peoples including its five million Jews, the Hitler bands are now reeling beneath the Soviet blows. Even from occupied Europe, the flame of resistance glows, as it glowed during the epic of the Warsaw ghetto. The aggressor has lost his initiative; it is upon his cities that the hail of retribution falls. With poetic justice, and as if to add symbol to achievement, the descendants of Titus unconditionally surrender. Certainly as we look back upon the year which is past, we have much for which to be thankful.

But even as we remained undaunted by partial defeat, so partial victory must not weaken our resolve, or cause us to relax our efforts. It is, after all, the lesser of the Hamans who has fallen. For our millions of brothers in the toils of Nazism, for the millions of all peoples who await the armies of liberation, the hour of deliverance may be approaching, but it has not yet struck. Great effort must yet be made, great sacrifice must still be endured, before great victory can be ours.

Let us face the New Year, therefore, both encouraged by the good tokens which have been vouchsafed to us, and keenly conscious of the tremendous tasks which still lie ahead. Upon this sacred occasion, Canadian Jewry again dedicates itself to the cause which has so vitally engaged it during the past years. For the year 5704, it is convinced, will be a year in which great history will be made. In that history it is determined to play its part, as befits citizens of the British Empire, champion of liberty! To that history it is determined to make its contribution as befits the heirs of a great civilization and the free sons of a people who have their enslaved brothers to redeem!

Three Faiths To Issue Peace Plan

A statement of post-war principles and proposals, the first of its kind to be indorsed by leaders of the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths, will be issued soon to throw the weight of U. S. churches behind the movement for an international organization to secure a just and durable peace throughout the world.

The statement will be indorsed by about thirty officers of leading national church groups and by the country's outstanding prelates. It is expected to be released formally within two weeks.

An official of the Roman Catholic Church said that the statement will be drawn in part from the five-point peace proposal made by Pope Pius XII in a Christmas Eve address to the College of Cardinals in 1939, the "six pillars of peace" adopted by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America last March, and various pronouncements by leading American rabbis.

Negotiations seeking a common understanding acceptable to adherents of the three faiths have been conducted for several months by Protestant, Catholic and Jewish leaders, including officials of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the National Catholic Welfare Conference and the Synagogue Council of America.

New Year Greetings to our Jewish friends and customers!

The Work Of The United Jewish Refugee And War Relief Agencies

How Canadian Jews Help Their People In The Hour Of Need

By Saul Hayes, Of Montreal, National Executive Director, U.J.R. And W.R.A.

It is not an easy task to briefly summarize the extensive work of the United Jewish Refugee and War Relief Agencies. I shall therefore confine myself to the more important work accomplished during the year under review.

In thus dealing with the refugee problem, we may consider three important aspects of it, namely:

A) Admission of refugees to Canada and their settlement here.

B) Relief work outside Canada.

C) Planning for post-war immigration.

A) ADMISSION OF REFUGEES

Children Movement

a) Last October the U.J.R. and W.R.A. succeeded to obtain from the Canadian Government a permit for the admittance of 1,000 refugee children from France but the sudden German occupation of France, and the subsequent political and transportation difficulties, made it impossible for us to use these permits. The hope of putting into effect the children's movement has not been abandoned. The U.J.R. in cooperation with the J.D.C. have undertaken steps to further the realization of the project. Only recently Mr. Mackenzie King, the Prime Minister, referred in Parliament to these thousand permits and stated that they are still valid.

Bermuda Conference

b) We are in constant touch with the offices of the Prime Minister and Minister of Mines, (which includes the Department of Immigration). On the occasion of the Bermuda Conference, the U.J.R. was a signatory of the petition presented by the World Jewish Congress to the delegates of the Conference.

Representations to Canadian Government

c) We have presented to the Prime Minister of the Dominion a three-point programme for immediate action for the relief of Jewish refugees. We have asked in particular for the admission to Saul Hayes, 5668 Notre Dame de Grace Avenue, Montreal, National Executive Director, United Jewish Refugee and War Relief Agencies. —Associated Screen News Ltd.

Canada of a greater number of children; to organize a system of feeding the Jews in the ghettos, similar to the system employed in sending food to Greece; and for Canadian participation in all international relief measures for European Jews. Our representations have been answered formally by the Prime Minister who has again assured us of the readiness of the Canadian Government to do its part in a cooperative effort to deal with a tragic position of the victims of Nazi persecution. The Prime Minister added that "methods may be developed which will relieve the suffering of the Jews of Europ as rapidly as the circumstances of the war will permit."

Delegation to Mr. Crerar

d) Recently a delegation representing our organization again visited Mr. T. A. Crerar, the Minister of Mines. We were given an opportunity to present our case fully. Mr. Crerar promised favourable consideration of our requests and Mr. King in his statement made in Parliament referred to our representations and reiterated his willingness and goodwill to cooperate with us.

Press Comments

e) We have not embarked upon a large scale propaganda campaign in regard to the possibilities of securing the admission into Canada of Jewish refugees, however, the press of Canada has given great prominence to our statements of our three point programme and to the address of our National President for the Winnipeg Conference of the Canadian Jewish Congress last May, wherein he formulated the presentation upon which our claims rest. In addition the reports of the condition of the Jews in Europe have evoked spontaneous and powerful comments from the press of the country. A number of editorials have appeared and the press opinion was reflected in the emphasis given to the news reports from Europe. The substance of all these comments is that Canadians should do something specific for the relief of this problem. The U.J.R. has now published a booklet containing the editorials of almost all important newspapers of Canada.

Petition

f) The U.J.R. is continuously cooperating with the National Committee on Refugees, that functions under the chairmanship of Senator Cairine R. Wilson. This committee is now about to sponsor a nationwide petition to the Government for admission of refugees to Canada. The petition will be signed by many thousands of Canadians of all faiths and origins. Several months ago this committee submitted a memorandum to the Government urging immediate action for the relief of the Jews of Europe. Senator Wilson spoke on the floor of the Senate to the same effect. The Committee has sponsored a number of lectures, forums, radio-addresses, and pamphlets and has enlisted the support of many of the most prominent citizens of our country in the cause of the Jewish victims of the war.

Problem of Internees

g) While on the subject of the admission of refugees to Canada I would like briefly to report on the present status of the so-called internees. The internment problem as such is now nearing its solution. The Central Committee is trying to obtain the release of the small balance of men who are now still in camp. Unfortunately the problems of all these refugees are not at an end with their release from camp. They are not regular immigrants in the country but are in special categories. They have a host of problems to work out and constantly require our guidance. The work is so extensive that the Central Committee for Interned Refugees has begun publication of a periodical newsletter for their guidance and information.

B) RELIEF WORK OUTSIDE CANADA

As you know, the U.J.R. is the official Canadian agency for the Joint Distribution Committee. The greatest budget in the history of the J.D.C. has been passed for expenditure for 1943, and we in Canada also have to make available the greatest sum in our history. Briefly the present situation is that transmission for overseas relief, costing millions of dollars, have to be met for Switzerand, Spain, Portugal, North Africa, and Soviet Asia. Emigration costs of refugees from the Balkans to Palestine and from Lisbon to America also have to be provided. By arrangements of the officers of the U.J.R. Government authorities at Ottawa we transmit monies to Palestine for the J.D.C. programme and thus enable the J.D.C. to pour that much more money into other spheres of operation. In the first six months of 1943 the U.J.R. has expended nearly $200,000 for the J.D.C. programme overseas. The demands are still coming in and they are likely to increase. It should interest you further to note that large numbers of Jews are, through J.D.C. operations, receiving food parcels in Soviet Asia, as food is being purchased in India, Teheran and Palestine. Negotiations are now being undertaken to purchase large quantities of food in Egypt.

In particular, I would like to list two important probems:

Many Jews are asking why food can be sent to Greece but not to the ghettos of Poland. I would like you to know that we are doing all we can in this direction. We are in constant communication with the J.D.C. and World Jewish Congress; both these agencies have contacted the Bureau of Economic Welfare in Washington with a view to finding ways and means for sending food to the ghettos. In our three-point programme submitted to the Government of Canada we have specifically stressed the importance of this problem. We have pointed out that Canada should use her experience in a

Rosh Hashonah Greetings

The Days Of Awe:

"A Time Of Recollection To Test Every Spirit And Every Soul"

By Rabbi Emil L. Fackenheim, 90 South Drive, Toronto

Again the Days of Awe have come with their message "testing the soul" like the message of no other Jewish festival. They direct our thoughts on no external historical event. They do not concern the Jewish people and their mission. They do not preach a future of universal social justice. They disregard the world outside and address the individual in its loneliness before God.

In their message concerning sin and repentance, haughtiness and humility, despair and faith, lies a most passionate faith in the fundamental importance of what goes on in the individual, and whoever does not share this faith must be impervious to this message. Hustling community activities, the filling of synagogues, even the boosting of welfare funds are not the adequate means to meet the "test of the soul".

We are ill prepared for this message, for we live in a time of rapidly declining individualism. Our age of the masses necessarily directs our activity on number rather than intensity, on human beings as factors in a statistic rather than on single individuals as such. The mass-situation compels the most progressive-minded to demand that the most urgent needs of the masses be dealt with before what some regard as little more than caprices of individual "souls".

The war with all its mass activities has of necessity increased immensely the de-individualization of modern man. And, indeed, who can take the inner problems of one individual seriously at a time when people starve by the thousands! Most people become impatient listening to the revelations of one preparing his soul for the last hour at a time when thousands loose their lives day by day!

And yet, we must take the soul" seriously. Fighting for the freedom of the individual we must not let this individual die. We are told that economic individualism is no longer workable, but even if this is true, the individual is not completely conceivable in economic terms. We must put the common good and common duties of war before individual aspirations, but we shall render no service to the community, if we serve it without soul.

Most of our ideas concerning the individual, its rights and duties, which we are inclined to consider as almost self-evident, are the result of a long evolution in ancient Judaeo - Christian thought. That "a man should die for his own crime only" is a conviction based on a profound faith in man's spiritual nature, his conscience and his responsibility; and it is horribly demonstrated by the totalitarian practices of our day that it is far from being a truth self-evident to all men.

The conception of rights and duties of the individual could arise only in a civilization which had a fundamental faith in the importance of what goes on inside the individual, a faith incomparably exhibited in the dramas of the soul found in the Psalms.

The conceptions regarding the rights of man which we cherish and for which we are fighting will be creatively carried on only if the faith basic to them remains alive, if we are willing to submit to the "test of the soul," if we are willing to take seriously problems like sin and repentance, haughtiness and humility, despair and faith, not although, but because they are subjective categories. Let us therefore listen to the message of the Days of Awe: for their "test of the soul" lays bare the very root of human existence.

Daughter Of Baroness De Rothschild To Wed

Miss Bettina de Rothschild, daughter of Baroness Alphonse de Rothschild, of New York and Vienna, and the late Baron de Rothschild, will be married to Lieut. Matthew J. Looram, Jr., U.S.A., son of Mrs. Constance Peabody Looram, of Great Barrington, Mass., and Matthew J. Looram, of Baltimore, on Saturday afternoon at 1040 Park Avenue.

Miss de Rothschild, who will be given in marriage by an uncle, Baron Louis de Rothschild, has chosen her sister, Miss Gwendoline de Rothschild, for her only attendant. The prospective bridegrooms father will be best man.

The bride-elect is a granddaughter of the late Baron Albert de Rothschild, of Vienna, and of the late Edmund Sebag-Montefiore, of London. She was educated abroad. Lieutenant Looram, a grandson of Mrs. Richard A. Peabody of New York, was graduated from St. Paul's School and Harvard College, where he was a member of Iroquois and Hasty Pudding Institute of 1770. He belongs to the Union Club here.

The Jewish Hospital Of Hope

By Jack R. Bogarte, President, Of Montreal

The Jewish Hospital of Hope, the only institution of its kind in Canada, had its origin in the depressing and distressing conditions in which so many so-called incurable patients found themselves. It was built to meet that need. Once the topic of much discussion as to whether such a hospital was required, it is now agreed that it has become an indispensable and integral part of the communal and social work of this city. Many opponents of the project have become its proponents.

The City of Montreal in 1932 donated the land on which the hospital is built, and it was formally opened on June 14th, 1942. The first patient admitted on September 4th of the same year. The original plans provide for fifty beds and everyone of these beds is now occupied. The Board of Administration is studying the serious problem of providing adequate accommodation for all applicants, several of whom are from various localities in Canada. It will be possible to accommodate approximately seventy patients when the help problems will have become less acute.

It is a matter of great regret that it has been necessary to exclude various types of patients such as the blind, epileptics, and mental cases. Moreover, children are not admitted.

The American Hospital Association has extended to this institution the privilege of becoming a member, an international recognition of merit, service, and importance. The hospital has a resident physician and medical superintendent. There is an attending staff of nine doctors in addition to a medical board of eight doctors, headed by Dr. Joseph Kaufmann.

Comfort for the patient is the cardinal principle of this hospital and the fundamental purpose is to lessen human suffering. The patients are assured of the benefits of unexcelled facilities in their most trying moments. This non-sectarian institution receives frequent requests from the Jewish General Hospital and others to accommodate some of their patients, whose condition warrants removal to this hospital. It has been a source of great help to these institutions in relieving the acute bed shortage in our community.

A number of patients, now hospitalized in this institution, were formerly assisted and maintained by the Baron de Hirsch Institute. Federation now has been relieved of this financial burden with the consequent saving of a large sum of money. Federation gives no funds to this hospital.

The patients enjoy the comforts of a well-planned and well-managed institution, where all the dietary laws and Jewish holidays are observed and proper religious services are held. They derive the psychological benefits from an atmosphere in which they are understood and this strengthens their hope and gives them consolation. No longer do these children of misfortune suffer in friendless solitude.

A number of patients, once considered incurable and helpless, have been able to leave this hospital in a very satisfactory condition and to resume life among the members of their respective families. Behind the doors of this institution lie the hope of many patients, for as the Bible says (Jeremiah); "For I will restore health unto thee and I will heal thee of thy wounds, saith the Lord".

This hospital has eradicated distressing conditions in many home where the shadow of despair and event death appeared to hover over sufferers writhing on a bed of pain in some dark, dismal and squalid room, lacking essential services and conveniences. The community has appreciated the need of this institution and has extended thereto a generous measure of assistance.

Special mention is made of the women of the twenty-one Units, all striving for the sole purpose of helping to foster the progress of this cause. A great debt of gratitude is due to them.

The hospital primarily administers to the poor. The majority of the patients are non-paying, many of them having arrived after a long pilgrimage in which body and spirit and the family pocket book have been broken.

The deficit incurred in the administration of this institute must of necessity be very great. Notwithstanding the fact that the cost of maintenance and the cost of the building and equipment have exceeded the sum of $250,000.00, there is no mortgage and the small liabilities are more than offset by good outstanding pledges. It is a magnificent monument and a great testimonial to Jewish citizenship.

The hospital has not appealed to the public for funds for some time and the board is anxious to avoid a campaign. This can be accomplished only if successful means of maintenance are provided.

It is with pardonable pride that thousands of our citizens can say "I am one of those who build it". What a marvelous feeling to be able to say that as you gaze at the building, the sanctuary of healing and hope for so many patients. It is now the duty of all citizens to become associated with this cause and be able to say "I am one of those who help to maintain it." Think of the honourable legacy you will thus leave to posterity.

A large, impressive tablet has been erected in the lobby of the hospital on which will be inscribed in gold letters the names of the public-spirited citizens who have helped to make this hospital possible. In addition there is a memorial tablet, a perpetual monument and everlasting benediction to those in whose memory contributions have been made.

The founders and the builders of this haven of hope were ever mindful of the fact that to be a strong hand in the dark to another in time of need, to be a cup of strength to a human soul in a crisis, is to know the glory of life.

The officers and members of the board of administration extend to all donors and friends best wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year.

to be the witnesses of that heritage and in personal living and striving be exemplars of righteousness and justice.

When the forces of reaction come upon the stage of history we, the shock-troops of human liberation, are the first to suffer attack. But this is the responsibility of our spiritual greatness as the people who discovered The One Eternal God for mankind. Not easy is this responsibility of witnessing. There are those within Israel who are known as escapists and assimilationists who desert Israel and the Torah! But, alas, what tragic figures are such anemic Jews. They are in truth euthanasian Israelites, hopeless creatures.

Rosh Hashonah summons us to heroic acts in the expression of Jewish living. Encouraged and strengthened are those who come into the sanctuary on the New Year and in there converse with the saints and heroes of Israel's past. On Rosh Hashonah 5704 we shall think especially of the heroes of the European ghettos who, facing sure death at the hands of the Nazis, fought the heroic fight against Fascism and dealt blow after blow, though poorly armed, to the enemies of Israel and mankind. We find courage, too, in the thousands of Jewish heroes who, under allied direction, are giving all to liberate mankind from the pestilence of Nazism and Fascism. We trust the world will ever remember the achievements of Palestine Jewry in helping General Montgomery to drive Rommel and his legions out of Africa and thus to avert the threat to the Suez and the entire Near East.

But Judaism's great preaching has been for moral heroism which in an hour of distress can be more uplifting than mere physical or military bravery. We hear on our holydays the voices of Rabbi Akiba, the victims of the Inquisition, the victims of Nazism who died with the Shema Yisroel on their lips assured of the triumph of the Jewish spirit, come what may.

We are indeed reinvigorated in body and soul on Rosh Hashonah Day as we contemplate and review the heroism of Israel's past and present. "I shall not die but live and declare the works of God"—is the classic motto of Israel today as of yesterday.

And finally on the New Year we Jews become especially aware of the sense of the Messianic. On this holy day we look forward in hope for a new day and better world despite the fact that the world has gone back to ancient prejudices. No matter how dark is the contemporary hour, Judaism urges us to look beyond the hour, beyond the century, beyond eternity to God. For the synagogue the golden age is ever B'acharis Ha Yomin, not in the past but in the future.

Greece looked back to the days of Pericles for its golden age; Rome, too, sought its golden age in the past. Not so the Jew. With us of the synagogue the Messiah is yet to come. The age of the greatest glory is in the womb of time. With high courage let us realize that this is a glorious hour, though painful, giving rebirth to mankind's greatest hopes and ideals. If man be but true to the divinity within him, his future achievements shall yet dwarf his present failures.

Thus in this year 5704, bearing on its wings tokens of liberation, let us renew especially our fellowship with God through mounting victory. We must resolve as we usher in the New Year, to behold in all its glory the Jewish view of life which is the global view. And with an awareness and revival of our appreciation for beauty and heroism, meet in hope humanity's new, bright age of a growing, just peace and just order for all the children of men.

In the spirit of this Rosh Hashonah creed we repeat the traditional blessing: "May it be Thy will, O Lord, our God and God of our Fathers, to renew unto us a Shina Tova Umetuko."

The Four Freedoms

By Professor Watson Kirkconnell, Of McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario

Twenty-two years ago I stood at the edge of the Libyan Desert, near Cairo. Behind me were the green fields and palm-tree groves of the Nile Valley. Before me, to the west, were almost limitless leagues of sand and rock, stretching away toward Tobruk, Benghazi, Tripoli, and Tunis.

About twenty-two days ago, in a Canadian theatre, I saw on the screen that same wilderness of rock and sand, thronged with the brave champions of human freedom. And I saw that rock and sand stained with blood of a great victory, a "Desert Victory"—whose last chapter has only recently been written in the hills of Tunisia and on the beaches of Cape Bon.

"Rock, Sand, and Blood" may well symbolize the cheerless and bitter years of struggle through which we are passing, the heat and burden of the conflict, and the blood of sacrifice poured out.

What is the struggle for? To what purpose are the United Nations pouring out money like water? To what end are brave men, including those of Canada, laying down their lives? The defeat of wanton aggression, some will say; the thwarting of a bestial conspiracy to conquer and exploit the world; the protection of our country from assault and ravage. All that is true, as far as it goes. But it is too negative an explanation.

If the valor of our fighting men is not to be sacrificed in vain, we shall need to have an interpretation that is dynamic for the mind and the spirit. We live in a world that is threatened by fascism; and the challenge of fascism (of which Nazism is the worst of many bad versions) is more than a military challenge. We might conceivably win the war only to lose the peace through the effective development of fascism within our own nation. We need to have a dynamism of democracy animating our people, in war and in peace, if the evil spirit of fascist violence is not to enter in and to possess our national life.

When I condemn fascism, what do I mean by the word? What is this political conspiracy that lurks like a rattlesnake in the grass of our national life? Fascism is not just a term of abuse to hurl at someone who disagrees with you politically. The fascist is a man with a definite mentality, a definite method, a definite philosophy, and a definite program. I am not thinking of the historic fascism that imposed itself on the Italian people in 1922. I refer rather to a dark wave of anticonstitutional politics that has flowed through the national life of most western nations in the past thirty years, and has even manifested itself in Canada.

The fascist believes in direct political action by a militant minority. He believes that British parliamentary government is obsolete and futile, and needs to be swept away by a virile dictatorship. He assumes that hatred between classes in the community is natural and inevitable. He therefore foments that hatred by slanderous propaganda in preparing for the ultimate day of violence. He believes so fanatically in his own infallibility that he is ready to gain power by murder and to maintain power by murder. The blood-bath of revolution is to be followed by the blood-bath of the concentration-camp and the party purge.

The fascist regards his political system as "the wave of the future," a system historically destined to triumph over an effete parliamentary regime. "You can't fight against fascism," he will tell you with a rattlesnake glitter in his eye. His philosophy is not based on religious faith, but on bitter concepts of economic or racial strife. He believes in his cause with passionate intensity, and regards the foulest means as fully justified in securing his rise to power. He believes in the dictatorship of a single political party, possessing strict discipline and stark uniformity of belief. He arrogates to his party the role of a "self-conscious minority."

He claims to be working on behalf of the great mass of the common people, but he says that they are stupidly unaware of the true revolutionary issues. Only he, as a member of the elite, understands the inexorable movements of history and is ready to shed blood in victorious conformity with those movements. His mouth is full of fine ideals, but his left hand holds a dagger.

Such is fascism, the revolutionary conspiracy of a minority, claiming to act on behalf of the nation and the common people. Fascism may be either of the Right or of the Left. That is, it seeks totalitarian tyranny either for the Capitalist or for the Socialist. Whether of the Right or the Left, it is a menace to the British tradition of parliamentary liberty and religious faith. It regards that tradition as old and corrupt. It appeals to young people to turn to a more dynamic program. We must strive to bring our young people to see in British democracy a system that is still more vital.

"Staggering" is a favourite word for describing war production these days. But when you get up to two hundred and ninety-eight millions of yards — our score to date — we feel there is some justification for it.

All of that material does not go to the front line; there are scores of home front cotton textile products that are urgent in their own, less dramatic way. Overalls and wiping rags for war workers, are good examples. But regardless of the use to which it is put, this production means a diversion from our normal civilian supplies.

We know that Canadians realize this, and are accepting the limited supplies of civilian textile products with good grace. We would just like to thank them for their understanding.

And what ever we can make, over and above the requirements of war, we will devote to the demands of a peacetime public that has shown its appreciation of our products.

DOMINION TEXTILE COMPANY LIMITED

The charter of our dynamic democracy may be found in the Four Freedoms enunciated by Churchill and Roosevelt: Freedom of Speech, Freedom from Want, Freedom from Fear, and Freedom of Worship.

(1). Freedom of speech is the very essence of the British tradition. We assume that all men have some measure of judgment and intelligence; that no man is infallible in the political sphere; and that the best augury for arriving at the truth is in the free intercourse and debate of many minds. The classical exposition of this doctrine of free speech is to be found in John Stuart Mill's book On Liberty, published in 1859. It may be briefly summarized: When a new political opinion differs from the generally accepted opinion, it may be either right or wrong. If it is right, its forcible suppression will rob mankind of an important truth. If it is wrong, its suppression would deprive the accepted opinion of such controversy as would prevent it from lapsing into stale political dogma, held without conviction. Often both the old opinion and the new contain elements of truth and falsehood, and the clash between them can result in a clarification of human thought.

This is a political principle that lays great responsibilities on the individual citizen. It assumes that there is preeminent value in the development of wisdom and judgment in each member of the State. Instead of demanding blind totalitarian allegiance to a Leader and to his program, it calls on the citizen to share intelligently in the shaping of public policy. British democracy, based on this principle, seeks to build a nation of men and women and not a nation of robots. It is the most difficult of political systems to operate, even as it is the most complex and the most mature. It is not as efficient in time of war as is a dictatorship. But it holds the most stable promise of human progress, for it permits continual change by peaceful persuasion and electoral and parliamentary decision. The fascist dictatorship, however, whether of the Left or of the Right, having seized power by violence, can not admit any rival political organization and rules by the continuous suppression of freedom.

At this point, we encounter one of the most insidious and deceptive arguments of the fascists, especially those of the Left. "All government," they say, "is based on force, and therefore the fascist conspiracy is acting legitimately in planning to take over by force." This is fundamentally false, as applied to the democracies. A truer statement is that of Disraeli, quoted recently by Winston Churchill, "Nations are ruled either by tradition or by force." In a democracy like Britain or Sweden or Switzerland the processes of national life are overwhelmingly determined by the general consent of the mass of the people. The police are few in number and implement the national folkways and the regulations arrived at by the free legislatures and courts of the country. All this is a self-cleansing, self-perpetuating tradition of freedom. As I shall indicate later, it may not have created for all of its citizens the social and economic conditions in which that freedom can be fully significant, but the general system is clearly one of liberty.

It is quite otherwise with the fascist one-party dictatorship that comes into power through revolution, for here all freedom is destroyed for speech and Press and rival political parties.

It is axiomatic that this has been so in Nazi Germany. There is a marked tendency, however, to assume that the regime in Soviet Russia, which also came into power through one-party revolution and dictatorship, is an exception to the rule. Our Canadian fascists of the Left, the Communists, have been exploiting the military heroism and economic prowess of the Soviet as a triumphant vindication of Communist rule in general. As one of them explained to me recently: "We want Tim Buck to do for Canada what Stalin has done for Russia."

To such people, and even to some well-meaning non-Marxist advocates of a Christian social order, it is blasphemous to seek a balanced and judicial view of the Soviet system. Let us seek, however, to strike a trial balance, for it is necessary, unless we are to suffer a national revulsion of feeling later on, to view that matter realistically. Cooperation with Russia in the post-war world will be very important, and, Stalin has wisely done much of late to make the collaboration possible; but the collapse of a rhapsodical picture of Russia, as the result of some untoward episode, might have unfortunate effects on our national thinking.

On the credit side, one must set the epic heroism of Sebastopol and Stalingrad, chapters of bravery unsurpassed in the history of mankind. On the credit side likewise are the clubs, libraries, theatres, cinemas, hospitals, and laboratories for the benefit of the working people, together with the virtual elimination of illiteracy among a once backward population. The increase of production, both industrial and agricultural, and the technical level of achievement in transport and industry, constitute an astonishing record

When we turn to political life, however, we find a totalitarian dictatorship that has grown ever more rigid with the passing of the years. "In a One-Party State, where opposition is identical with high treason, elections become meaningless, because the electorate has no alternative." Politically, the regime depends on a curious mixture of violence and mass propaganda. The system has been well described as "a plebiscitary dictatorship," one "which relies as much on the consent and support of the people as on the use of force; a dictatorship for which mass appeals and crude propaganda speeches are as important as a secret police and mass purges, a dictatorship which can ruthlessly kill thousands of its own citizens and yet muster the loyalty and faith of millions."

Much of the success of the regime has been due to its progressive discarding of many phases of orthodox Marxism. Equality of income has yielded to the Stakhanovite system, whereby a pace-setting artisan may get as much as thirty times the wages of his less competent fellow. The peasant has been reconciled to the collective farm by the allotment to him and his family of a small individual holding. The government itself offers interest-bearing investments to the thrifty. The disbanding of the Comintern now spits on Communism throughout the world.

Insofar as the Soviet regime has made good, it has done so by mixing elements of Capitalism with its Socialism. As Joseph E. Davies states in his Mission to Mocow (p. 301): "In order to succeed, the regime has dropped the principle of Communism in practical application." Insofar as it has failed to produce democratic freedom, on the other hand, it is because of the sinister legacy of revolutionary violence. Far from proving the advantages of a Leftist revolution for Canada, it suggests the bankruptcy of the revolutionary program. We have much to learn from the Soviets, as I shall point out presently, but the way of class-struggle and dictatorship is a bloody pit instead of an open door. As Joseph E. Davies again remarks (in passages unscrupulously omitted from the Hollywood version of his book): "The horrors of the 'terror' every one here feels. There are indications of it on all sides . . . No physical betterment of living standards could possibly compensate for the utter desolation of the liberty of thought and speech and the sanctity of the individual." Maxim Litvinoff himself vouches for the honesty of Davies' verdict of life under the Soviets.

VICTORIOUS Greetings At the NEW YEAR

● To you and yours, sincere good wishes for the New Year. Hydro joins with you in the hope that before another New Year rolls 'round there may be an end to the bloodshed and horror that has for so long engulfed the world.

At this moment the powers of tyranny are feeling the might of the armies of justice and right. Soon, let us hope, we shall be able once again to turn our thoughts and energies to pursuits of Peace.

Hydro has been a tower of strength to Canada's war effort. Daily, your Hydro is making an important contribution to the cause of Victory by supplying power to Ontario's great war industries.

Present restrictions will be removed, and the need for conserving electricity lessened as the war situation permits. When peace is won extensions will be in order, services will be augmented. Meanwhile, it should be remembered that to use Hydro sparingly now in home and office is to hasten the day of Victory.

To Conquer The Sea That Laps The Shores Of Palestine

The Story Of Jacob Caspi

By Rev. Louis I. Rabinowitz, Senior Chaplain Of The British Forces In The Middle East

I. In the Granite City

I first heard of Jacob Silverberg, but not by name, away up in the granite city of Aberdeen, on the north-east coast of Scotland. I was Jewish Chaplain to the Scottish Command, and had arranged a Service in that city. I had been given the address of the Hon. Secretary of the local Congregation, a Mr. Teffman, and wrote to inform him of my intended visit. My letter brought a cordial invitation to spend the evening of my visit with him, and readily accepted.

Mr. Teffman was a customs and excise official in Aberdeen, and his charming wife and he made me feel thoroughly at home. The Jewish community was too small to appoint a minister; so all the usual functions of a minister, in addition to innumerable others by his own free choice and out of love for his faith, devolved upon Mr. Teffman. He it was, practically singlehanded except for the help of his wife, who kept alive the spirit of Judaism in this far-away outpost.

If an anti-semitic article appeared in a local journal, he it was who took up the cudgels and under a pseudonym—for excessive modesty was his outstanding characteristic—there would appear a reasoned, logical, balanced and convincing answer. The Jewish flotsam and jetsam which find their way to a coastal town and port—refugees, mendicants, sailors—inevitably drifted to him, and as far as was humanly possible he supplied their wants.

On one occasion the governor of the local prison received a request from a rare bird, a Jewish prisoner in the local jail, for facilities to observe one of the Festivals. Naturally turning for information and guidance to this one representative Jew of the town, and out of his evident perplexity as to how to address a man who had no official status as a minister, he coined a phrase peculiarly apt to describe Mr. Teffman. The letter came addressed to "Mr. Teffman, Jewish Agent."

All these and many more details emerged from a dossier, a bulky file in which this Jewish Agent kept all documents relevant to this voluntary branch of his work; and what I saw of it only whetted my curiosity about the various experiences he had had as communal factotum. It was a dreary night, outside the snow lay thick, and sleet was falling. There was a roaring fire in the grate, a hospitable bottle of whisky and a siphon of soda on the table. I filled my pipe, settled down in the comfortable shabby armchair, and made it clear by my looks that I wanted to hear more. Thus it was that I first heard of Jacob Silverberg. In retrospect it seems impossible that not once was his name mentioned; but if it was I completely forgot it.

Jacob Silverberg was a young Polish Jew who had determined to train as a halutz, a pioneer in the upbuilding of Palestine. The bent of his ambition, however, was not in the direction of agricultural labor but of those who go down to the sea in ships. He wanted to become a seaman, mercantile mariner, fisherman or even stevedore, wresting a livelihood from the seaboard of Palestine and thereby helping to add to the natural resources of the Land of Israel.

I was in a better position than my informant to "place" this young idealist. I had for some time been a member of the Zebulun Society, a Jewish nautical training society whose aim it was to establish and develop Jewish seafaring in and around Palestine. The slogan of this movement—Kibbush Ha-Yam ("Conquest of the Sea")—was complementary to the two other slogans which had long become accepted—Kibbush Ha-Aretz ("Conquest of the Land") and Kibbush Ha-Abodah ("Conquest of Labor").

As the Mediterranean Sea washes the whole western coast of Palestine, coastal fishing and deep-sea fishing and the establishment of a Jewish mercantile marine represented an activity coming to the fore. I had for some years collected all the available data on the subject.

My scrapbook was full of cuttings from Hebrew newspapers

NEW YEAR'S GREETINGS—5704

YEAR of DESTINY

THE next twelve months will witness events which will profoundly affect the whole course of civilization. Desperate days are ahead as the United Nations poise for the final attack.

At home, our utmost effort is called for. Health is of first importance if we are to do our full share in this all-out drive for victory. Guard it by seeing that you and your family get health-guarding, balanced meals — meals which include an adequate supply of milk, the most complete of all foods.

Modern smartness in style-right interiors

With a little planning, out of date interiors can be rejuvenated with TEN TEST and transformed into rooms of modern charm and distinction. TEN TEST . . . the versatile insulating building board . . . is readily adaptable to almost any type of decorative treatment. Most important too, it does the job efficiently effectively and economically. You'll be agreeably surprised at the happy result of a TEN TEST installation, whether used for new construction or modernizing any room in the house . . . from basement to attic.

The exceptional adaptability of TEN TEST to so many diversified uses . . . its easy workability . . . its moderate cost and dependability . . . make it an important factor in the home. See your lumber dealer today or write for free sample and booklet to International Fibre Board Limited, Gatineau, Quebec.

EMPRI

Products that today carry the EMPRI trademark were being manufactured back in the days when this continent was emerging from a wilderness and great cities were in the making.

150 years of service! Through wars . . . peace and then conflict again . . . through lean years and good years EMPRI laces, braids and other lines have represented the best value obtainable.

Today a substantial percentage of our production is devoted to serving the forces of the United Nations. While we cannot provide a normal service to the trade at present we are looking forward to the day when we can give our whole attention to serving our regular trade again.

FACE THE FUTURE PHYSICALLY FIT

"A sound mind in a sound body" is the aim of the laws of Judaism. And Rosh Hashanah affords an excellent opportunity to make worthy resolutions for the New Year, to change this hope into a reality. Face the future with all the physical fitness you can attain. For this is paramount in troubled times like these.

Should you be troubled by constipation, therefore, due to lack of the proper amount of "bulk" in your diet, we suggest KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. It will help you get at the cause — and correct it. Eat ALL-BRAN every day, either as a cereal or in muffins, drink plenty of water, and keep regular . . . naturally Thousands agree ALL-BRAN is the "better way" because it does so much more than provide just temporary relief. Available at your grocer's in two convenient sizes.

In June he was elected by his fellow graduating students to receive the award of honor in recognition of his outstanding services to the school, combined with qualities of honor, scholarship, and sportsmanship. He is the first Jewish student to win this award, which is one of the traditional rites of the class, inaugurated some years ago by the Old Boys' Association. He was carried on the shoulders of his classmates to Westmount Park for the customary ducking in the pond. A further award of a medal to Herbert Shavne will be made at the next annual banquet of the Association. He has been awarded a Sidney J. Hodgson fellowship at McGill University.

Military Events No Longer Dominate Markets!

The unconditional surrender of Italy and the overthrow of Mussolini should have inspired a market celebration.

Instead of following the previous pattern of strong buying on good military news, a sharp reaction took place. W H Y?

The Financial News Letter . . . .

Published every Tuesday and Thursday, carries an intelligent and simply worded discussion of POLITICAL and ECONOMIC events which will dominate the market action of every type of security in the critical months which lie just ahead.

BLUEPRINT for LIVING

● Success is not an accident. Just as a plan is required to create a business or erect a building, a "blueprint for living" is required to assure financial success.

Such a plan is offered by Investors Syndicate of Canada Limited. Designed to your own specifications, it is the ideal method of creating "to-morrow's reserve" from "today's resources." These dollars today also help to finance the war needs of the Government . . . they work for Victory . . . for peace . . . and for you. This time-tested plan, is already helping thousands of Canadian men and women to reach their goal of financial independence. If you too desire financial independence, write our nearest branch for details of this plan, today!

Insure Valuable Records Against Fire

Taylor Safes have survived unnumbered fires without loss. Many times they have been buried in fallen masonry and subjected to enormous weight as well as terrific heat. They have always come through with contents undamaged. Taylor Safes today include the improvements suggested by over three quarters of a century of experience.

Established 1855

to
our Jewish Friends and Patrons

Mazola, the pure oil made from sun-ripened corn, is unexcelled as a delicious table oil. It mixes easily and smoothly with other necessary ingredients and imparts a distinctive and delightful flavour to salad dressings or Mayonnaise.

Mazola is unequalled for deep frying or sautering. It is most economical because it can be used over and over again without carrying the odour or flavour of one food to another.

Why Canadian Salmon Goes To Britain

REQUISITIONED

With her great North Sea mining fleet requisitioned by the Royal Navy, Britain today urgently requires more fish. Canadian salmon, rich in vitamins, is needed to sustain her fighting millions. That Canada's total 1942 salmon catch soon goes to Britain—where the need is greatest.

bodkin. When the grim task was completed, the form of the body was still clearly discernible, the legs widening out on account of the firebars.

I entered into conversation with the sailmaker. Hardly a trip, he told me, without one death. He received a bottle of rum and two pounds for this duty, out of which he had to provide the sailcloth and the firebars which cost roughly fifteen shillings.

I hardly slept that night. These exciting events which had so dramatically interrupted the bored routine of our voyage, the sultry humid heat, my curiosity about this boy—for he was no more—drove sleep away and filled my thoughts with a phantasmagoria of images and visions. When at last I did doze, it was to dream that it was all a mistake, that the sailcloth had suddenly stirred and they had found he was alive. So vivid was this dream that I awoke trembling and was tempted to rush out and make sure.

At last I fell into a heavy slumber. Almost immediately after, it seemed, I was awakened by my cabin steward bringing my morning cup of tea and saying, "Seven o'clock, Sir." I hastily got out of bed, had my tea and morning bath, shaved and dressed, and after a hurried saying of my prayers I repaired to the cabin of the Staff Commander.

We went together to a roped-off portion of the deck. A small group of men stood there with bared heads — the Ship's Captain, the Chief Officer, the bo'sun, five or six shipmates of the deceased. The bodly lay on two planks projecting over the ship's side, the planks resting on two trestles, a high one behind a lower one in front, so that it lay on a gentle incline. Over all was draped a Union Jack, loosely tied to the edges of the planks.

I handed out six Authorized Daily Prayer Books I had, indicated the pages and commenced to read the Burial Service. I naturally wore my hat, and in the circumstances thought it unnecessary to ask the others to do so, but they did so. The Service completed, I recited the following words: "If we ascend into Heaven, Thou art there, and if we dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there, Thou, O Eternal art our God, and underneath are Thy everlasting arms. Into Thy hand we commend his spirit, Thou wilt redeem him, O Lord, God of Truth" — the first verse taken from the Chief Rabbi's Intercession Prayer, the second an adaptation of a well known Scriptural verse.

I gave the signal for the remains to be committed to the deeps; but before this was done the bo'sun gave some signal of his own, whereupon a weird unearthly stillness descended on us. I thought my imagination must be playing a trick with me, but I later found out what it was. The bo'sun's signal was for the ship's engines to stop. It was not even intended as a mark of respect. It was done to prevent the body being sucked under the ship and mutilated by the huge propellers. But it was nevertheless a peculiarly appropriate gesture. It was as though the mighty voice of the ship was stilled in homage to the majesty of death.

The bo'sun and another man stepped forward and gently raised the planks. The body slid quietly down with a faint susurrus of the friction of the canvas against the wood, leaving the Union Jack fixed to the planks. The others bared their heads. I stood at the salute. From where we stood it was impossible to see the body swallowed up by the sea; all we heard was an obscene, horrible smack and plop as the weighted corpse hit the surface of the ocean. It was the one strident discordant note in the whole ceremony.

With trembling voice I read the memorial prayer for "Jacob ben Abraham (since I did not know his father's name) Silverberg, known as Caspi," and the brief ceremony was ended. (I had asked permission for a minyan of the Jewish men on board to attend so that we could say kaddish, but this was the one request refused. Burials at sea must be kept as secret as possible. At our daily Service later in the day I recited kaddish without mentioning the reason.)

I accompanied Captain Dane back to his cabin to sign a certificate that I had officiated at the disposal of the body, and then it was that after thanking me for taking the Service and expressing his appreciation of its simple dignity he said, "There is one more matter in which you can help us, Padre. Among his effects are a few books and papers which must be in Hebrew. Would you care to go through them and see if there is anything in them which will be of interest to us?" I readily agreed, mainly, I must confess, in order to satisfy my own curiosity. He looked at his watch. "Time for breakfast, Padre! Come back in an hour and I'll have them all ready for you." In ten minutes I had finished my breakfast. The fifty minutes more dragged by with leaden feet. Promptly at 9:3 A.M. I knocked at the door of Captain Dane's cabin. He was not in. I waited for five minutes by the clock, but at least five hours in my imagination. Then he bustled in and laid on his desk a slim bundle of books, newspapers and writing-paper.

VI. Post-Mortem

The first thing that caught my startled gaze was my long-lost Hebrew periodical (Haolam of February 13, 1941). The moment my eyes lighted on it I knew that the puzzle of its disappearance was solved. There was nothing to identify it as yet; there was nothing inherently strange or remarkable in a Jew who was making his way to Palestine having a Hebrew newspaper. But something told me instantly I was right. To make assurance doubly sure, I picked it up and turned the first page. There, sure enough, was the article "The Celebration at Hedera," whose reading had been interrupted by the paper's disappearance. Captain Dane must have seen the startled look in my eyes, for he said, "Anything strange about it, Padre?" "No," I stammered, "just that it is the last thing I would have expected a sailor to have. It's a modern Hebrew weekly paper published in Palestine. If you will allow me, Sir, I'll take everything here to my cabin and go through it all carefully."

"That's exactly what I would like you to do."

"Very well, I'll translate these letters or notes into English, and if they give anything which you ought to know I'll let you know."

"I'm extremely obliged to you, Padre."

I picked up the books and left.

When I reached my cabin, the first thing I did was to take a bulky letter out of an unaddressed envelope. Unfolding the creases, I saw a beautiful Hebrew cursive script, clear and elegant as its writer. The letter was in Yiddish, not Hebrew, and when I saw the first words, they began to swim before my eyes. I dropped the letter, or rather it slipped from my nerveless fingers, and I lay down on my bed and tried to collect my thoughts. The letter was addressed to "Dear Mr. and Mrs. Teffman"!

The sight of these words brought it all back to me. Like the flash of a sudden revelation the whole pitiful, fantastic tragedy was made clear to me. The boy whose body I had less than two hours ago committed to the deep, the boy whom I knew only as "a Hebrew," the boy who for some reason had purloined my Hebrew paper, was none other than the cheerful and intrepid young potential "Conqueror of the Sea" whose romantic story, heard seven thousand miles away, had so fascinated and possessed me!

I almost wept with mortification. For six whole weeks we had been on the same ship, he to whom I had been drawn by such a powerful magnet of affinity and understanding, and we had never met. His hands had touched my books, in his cabin he had been reading my paper, but I was to extend to him the hand of brotherhood only in death, unaware of his identity.

Later, when I read the letter, as will be seen, I realized that a malignant fate had been even crueller than that in keeping us apart. For it revealed that he was the Jewish sailor who had been the guest of Mrs. Black during our shore leave. While I was in conversation with Mr. Austrater in the lounge of the hotel, he had been sitting in the dining room, and it was only by ill luck that we had not dined together!

Then when my thoughts turned to his fate, I am not ashamed to confess that I actually did weep. That such high hopes, such determination, such courage and idealism, such set purpose should come to naught in this utterly absurd manner! That the journey from Lodz to Gydnia, Gydnia to Aberdeen, Aberdeen to an English port, England to Africa, down to the southernmost tip of Africa and up again, every revolution of the propeller bringing him nearer and nearer to the haven of his desire, should end by his body being dumped overboard, somewhere in the Indian Ocean, with no stone to mark his resting-place!

With what high hopes he must have seen his goal approaching steadily nearer! What exaltation of spirit must have filled him! Had he overcome every obstacle, escaped submarine and gunfire, bombs and torpedoes, to fall a victim to sunstroke? I felt that I would have accepted his death with more resignation and less of rebelling had he died some heroic death, but even this was denied him.

At least once a week, as part of our Service for Setting Out on a Journey, we had read the 121st Psalm, and the words had a new meaning for me now. "The sun shall not smite thee by day nor the moon by night. The Lord shall guard thee from all evil. He shall guard thy soul. The Lord shall guard thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth and for evermore." Alas! The sun had smitten him by day. The Lord had not guarded him from evil. He had not guarded his going out nor his coming in.

God had forsaken him, and to me it meant more than the death of a young lad. In my soul I had looked on him as a symbol of the revival of the Jewish people in the teeth of all obstacles, and it seemed to my mind, distorted by grief and a feeling of futility, that it was a symbol of the abandonment of these hopes. I had said to myself when the thought of the possibility of his falling a victim to the U-Boat entered my mind, "Such devotion and strength of will must overcome all obstacles and fulfil its destiny, defying even the Angel of Death himself." I was wrong! The Angel of Death had mocked at him and stricken him down with what in the bitterness of my spirit I could only call a foul.

VII. But He Being Dead Yet Speaketh

I rose wearily from my bed. I owed it to myself and to Captain Dane, but, above all I owed it to young Jacob, to fulfil my task with thoroughness. There was a volume of Bialik's poems, thumbed and dog-eared, with various words underlined — apparently words about whose meaning he was uncertain: and a few of the poems was marked by a diagonal line. Next came the small edition of the Hebrew Bible printed by the British and Foreign Bible Society. One cover was missing, and the loose fly-leaf bore the inscription in Hebrew, "Jacob Caspi. 5701. Of those that go down to the sea in ships." The quotation was, of course, from the 107th Psalm, and I turned it up in the book. And there I saw that verses 23-30 were so heavily underlined in ink that it had run through the thin paper.

They that go down to the sea in ships,
That do business in great waters,
They see the works of the Lord, and His wonders in the deep.
For he commandeth and raiseth the stormy wind which lifteth up the wave thereof.
They mount up to the heaven, they go down to the depths, their soul is melted because of trouble.
They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man and are at their wits' end.
Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble and he bringeth them out of their distresses.
He maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still.
Then they are glad because they be quiet; so he bringeth them unto the haven of their desires.

The underlining of this passage gave me an idea. When on the previous day (was it only seventeen hours ago?) I had seen the quotation on his charm, I had asked myself if he knew its source. I turned up the Book of Jonah, and there sure enough was the same tell-tale evidence of interest. From the fourth verse of the first chapter to the fifteenth, it was all scored and underlined. So he had known! My interest quickened and I turned the pages at random. Every reference to the sea had been underlined and only such references. Verses 25 and 26 of the 104th Psalm, the account of Solomon's fleet, even single verses dealing with the sea. I turned to the 121st Psalm. It was unmarked.

I then took up my periodical. Here again he had marked certain passages, and on one page there was a note scribbled in the margin. In an account of Palestine's contribution to the war effort he had underlined this passage: "Scores of laborers from the harbor of Tel Aviv have already volunteered for the Hebrew Seaworkers Company (probably a Docks Operating Company). At the farewell gathering for the recruits D. Remez emphasized the historic value of recruiting of a company of Jewish dock laborers." And lower down on the same page a diagonal line marked an account of the desalting of the salty soil near the Dead Sea by a group of pioneers, while underlined were the words, "The Kvutzah which now numbers 120 comrades is also occupied with the artifical breeding of fish in fish ponds."

But his passionate devotion to everything pertaining to the sea of Palestine was shown even more clearly in a sarcastic four-word marginal note to an article on the economic position of Palestine in December 1940. A precis of a report of the Statistical Department of the Jewish Agency gave statistics of the number of workers employed in various branches of economic activity, food, textiles, clothing, metals and machinery, woodwork, leather, printing, chemistry, stone and cement, and electricity. One could almost see the young sea-dog reading it avidly to find some reference to fisheries or harbor work and sarcastically expressing his disappointment in the four Hebrew words meaning "Don't they eat fish in Palestine?"

That was all the printed matter, and for the second time I picked up the letter to the Teffmans. The first page was dated March 27th, it had been added to on subsequent days, and was still unfinished. I made a literal translation, but for reasons which I shall give later I kept it and gave Captain Dane only a censored version. Here is the letter.

March 27th, 1941.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Teffman,

With this letter I am keeping my promise to write to you, but it will be a long time before it reaches you. I am speaking English quite well now, but I cannot write well yet, and as you do not understand Hebrew well I am writing in Yiddish. Unfortunately there is no one on the ship who understands Yiddish, and as all our letters must be censored I cannot post this until the end of our long journey. The censors understand Yiddish where I am going.

As you know, I have not heard a word from my family since the war. I feel they are dead, or worse than dead in the concentration camp which Hitler has made for all Polish Jews in Lublin, and they must, if they are alive, think of me as dead. You are therefore the only friends I have in the world, and you have been so kind to me that I wish to write to you all about my hopes and happiness.

For I am very happy! You know how pleased I was to be a British sailor and to learn my craft from the best teachers in the world; but when I crossed the Atlantic to the great America, I enjoyed the work and I enjoyed seeing our ship fighting with the great waves and defeating them, and I helped in the victory. But when I arose in the morning and saw the sun behind me, I was sad that Eres Israel was getting further and further away. And even when we returned I knew it was to England and not to my land. But that is all finished.

I am on a ship which is going to a place near Eres Israel and they have given me permission to leave the ship when we arrive there and go to Eres Israel. When we left and I saw all the warships encircling us, I laughed and I said, "Great Great Britain (Grosse grosse Britainnice) is sending all these ships to make sure that little Jacob Silverberg reaches Eres Israel safely." We are going a roundabout way, but even the Jews in the time of Moses our Teacher were only allowed to reach Eres Israel by a roundabout way. It never was easy for us Jews, and to attain one's ideal one must be prepared to suffer a little. And this is a very pleasant suffering. I like the ship, I like my companions (chaverim), and I like to learn to become a good sailor, especially now that Erez Israel is so near. We are still going away from it, but soon we will turn in its direction.

April 6th.

My dear friends,

Yesterday we arrived at a port, but we could not go ashore. As there is little work to do, I am continuing with my letter. The sun is very hot, and we have been told to keep in the shade, but I must keep my eyes on it all day. It is a sign of the freedom and the joy of Eres Israel. No more darkness, only light and happiness. And I must get used to it now if I am to work in Eres Israel. My skin is so pale, pale like the Golus, and I want to be bronzed like that of a free man.

But today I do not feel happy. I did a foolish thing yesterday and I do not know how to mend it. I was sent up on the top deck (these words, as well as lifeboat, spell "lifeboate," were in English) to grease the machinery which lets down the lifeboat, and I saw some Hebrew books. They were a Bible and another book, and between them was a Hebrew journal. It was so long since I had seen one and I wanted to know what had been happening in Eres Israel. Without thinking that it was wrong I took it. I only wanted to read it on the lifeboat where no one could see me and then put it back, but when I got out of the lifeboat the owner of the books had returned. I saw his back, and on his shoulders were three stars, which meant that he was a high officer, a captain, and I was afraid he would report ("mason"), me as a thief, so I put it in my pocket and went quietly away. I am very sorry now that I took it, because I would have liked to speak to the Herr Captain who reads Hebrew, but now I could not. And it is the first time in my life that I have stolen anything. In Poland we do not have Jewish Captains, it is only in free England.

But I read in this paper that a company of Jewish sea-workers has been formed in Erez Israel to help England fight Hitler, and I shall try to join it when I get there. If I knew the Captain's name I would put the paper back in his room, but perhaps he has not missed it.

April 22nd.

Again we have reached land, but this time we went ashore. There is a wonderful club here, where all the men go. I was in there only a few minutes when a lady came up and asked me if I was Jewish. I said yes, and she told me she has a kosher hotel and invited me to come there for dinner. I was not interested in kashrus, but I wanted to meet Jewish people again and I came. She told me her son is also a sailor and that is why she picked me out. She gave me a very nice dinner, and I told her I wanted to be a sailor or a fisherman in Eretz Israel. She said she was also a Zionist, so I asked her why her son is in the English Navy and not a sailor in Eretz Israel. She said her son joined the Navy to fight Hitler, but I asked her if the Jews in Eretz Israel are not also fighting Hitler, and she said it was not the same thing. I do not understand her.

Tomorrow we sail again. I am so happy. It is now a straight line to Eretz Israel and every day will bring me nearer. Even if I do not find a ship to take me there from Egypt as a sailor, I have enough money to travel there as a passenger, and I shall become a soldier and sailor together. I shall write again as soon as we land and post this letter to you . . .

Yigal, The Conquest of the Sea

The other contents of the envelop included a Zionist shekel for Poland, dated 1939, a list written out in Hebrew of sailings from Alexandria to Haifa, with a note of the times of trains. But what pleased me most of all was a slip containing the address of the Teffilmann, written out with the greatest care phonetically in Hebrew characters.

I was in the highest degree reluctant to reveal to Captain Dane that I had any previous knowledge of this sailor. At first I thought it was because I could not bring myself to confess to the absurdity that I had "buried" someone unconscious of his identity, only to find out an hour or so later that I knew him, if the word can be used in these circumstances. But this explanation was unsatisfactory.

Deep down in my heart there was another feeling, incoherent and dim, of which I can now but vaguely discern the outlines. I had so identified myself in spirit with the visions and aspirations of this young sailor that he had become almost part of myself, a personification of my other self. All the thwarted ideals of my youth seemed to be living within him; and when I knew who it was had died, something died within me too, leaving an aching, gaping void. It seemed to me almost indecent, definitely impossible to tear away the veil and reveal the nakedness of my, or his, soul to a stranger. All that Jacob Silverberg, known as Capi, meant to me belonged to the secret places of my heart, over the portals of which was written, "No stranger may enter herein."

It was some such feeling also that resolved me to suppress from the copy of the letter I prepared for Captain Dane all mention of the "theft" of the journal, except for the one sentence about his intention to join the "company of Jewish sea-workers" of which he had read. The fear that an officer of the British Mercantile Marine with his rigid standards of honor would look askance at this seeming dereliction, and my passionate desire that there remain in the British officer's mind no slur or aspersion on Jacob's blameless character, certainly weighed with me; but again I had to confess there was more in it than that. For myself, I could by no conceivable stretch of the imagination regard the taking of this paper as a theft. It seemed to me like taking it from one pocket and putting it in another.

After typing out the bowdlerized version of the letter I spent a few minutes composing my thoughts, carefully working out in my mind the words I would use to the Staff Commander, and then I picked up the books and papers and made my way to his cabin. He greeted me with his usual cordiality.

"Found out anything, Padre?"

"Yes, sir. I've found out all there is to be found out. First of all, here is a translation of the letter which is very revealing, and here on a slip of paper I've found the address of the people to whom he is writing."

He picked up the letter and read it with concentrated attention, his brows knitted. At last he laid it down, and looked up to me, about to speak.

I continued. "Before you go any further, you may be interested in one or two other discoveries I've made," and I pointed out the underlined passages in the Bible and periodical, translating as I went. A look almost of awe suffused his face.

"What happens to these books and his other effects?" I asked.

"Oh, there are very strict rules about that. An inventory is made of all his effects. They are sealed and locked in the bullion-room, and at the next port they are given to the embarkation officer who arranges for them to be sent to his next of kin."

"Next of kin," I echoed. "He hasn't any."

"Oh no, Padre. I'm quite sure that especially in time of war we would never engage a member of the crew without some address as next of kin."

"Would you find out?" I asked in growing excitement.

"Certainly."

He left the cabin and returned with the document, which he handed to me. I read "Jacob Silverberg, aged 22. N.O.K. Father: Samuel Silverberg, 128 Sobieski St., Lodz, Poland."

"But you can't send anything there, Sir," I objected. "You see what he writes in his letter. He has not heard from his father since the war. In any case it is enemy-occupied territory."

"I am afraid that is not my business. The matter will pass out of our hands when we reach port and I hand over the effects. Probably it will be kept in England till after the war."

"But in view of his letter, could they not be sent to the Teffmans?"

"I'm sorry, Padre. We can't deviate from the Merchant Navy Act. I'll give a copy of this letter to the Embarkation Officer. More than that I cannot do."

"But his letter to the Teffmans will be posted?"

"Oh yes. I will send that in the official mail-bag."

I told him that I would also note of the address of Jacob's wife to the Teffmans and took a father. Who knew? Perhaps some avenue of approach would be found.

"Well, Padre, I'm afraid that's all."

"There's just one thing I'd like to tell you, Sir," I said. "I made a collection among my men to defray the expenses involved in our Passover celebration. We had a small balance over, and with the consent of the men I gave one half to the Chief Purser last week for Ships Charities. The other half has not yet been allocated. It is to go to some Jewish charity at my discretion. I think it would be most fitting and appropriate if I were to send it to the Jewish Nautical Society in Tel Aviv, donating it 'in memory of Jacob Capi, a fine Jewish seaman whom the sea claimed.'"

"Would you allow me," asked Captain Dane diffidently, "to add a mite to that sum?" He handed me five shillings which I accepted with gratitude.

"A fine Jewish seaman," he repeated thoughtfully. "Yes, Padre, a very fine Jewish seaman of whom you may well be proud. But I didn't know the Jews bred seamen or had Nautical Schools."

I gave him a brief description of the Kibbutz Ha-Yam movement and of its achievements. He was greatly impressed. "Poor fellow," he said. "But I'm sure it's the end he would have chosen. He set out to conquer the sea, but the sea conquered him."

the modern revolutionary regimes that they have promised full employment and social security, and have claimed to go straight to their objective without the babbling paralysis of democratic debate. The Nazi "Strength through Joy" program and the vast Soviet expenditures on social welfare both indicate the belief of these systems that men are more concerned with economic stability than with political freedom. Certainly there is an element of truth in all this. Political freedom may seem little more than formality, if penury, squalor, and unemployment are rampant in the land. Our whole approach to this problem is challenged when we find Soviet Russia in 1937, in the midst of a colossal program of military expenditure, still devoting 26,604,-552,000 rubles, or 27 per cent of the national budget, to social and cultural projects. In the face of such enlightened autocracy, democratic regimes to-day must likewise measure up to issues of human welfare or their permanence will be deservedly threatened. On this score, we have many problems to face:

(1). One of these is relatively full employment; and this is a much more complex busines with us. In a liberal atomistic society on the British model the standard is congenial employment at an acceptable wage. Under a dictatorship one must undertake any task assigned, no matter how harsh or how ill repaid, or one will be liquidated. Thus some of the most highly vaunted Soviet enterprises, such as the Moscow-Volga canal, were constructed by the slave-labor of hundreds of thousands of political prisoners. One must remind our rhapsodists of the Left, moreover, that the standard of living for the average worker in the Soviet Utopia has remained far lower than that in Britain or Canada.

(2). Blue-prints for social security, like the Beveridge Plan or the Marsh Plan, must be taken seriously.

(3). Large-scale housing projects for people in the lower wage brackets are a crying need. The housing situation in many cities in Canada is little short of criminal, when one compares it with the skill and conscience long since shown in, say, the Scandinavian countries.

The hardest denunciation uttered by Christ in all the Gospels was spoken against those who had seen their fellowmen hungry, thirsty, naked, and sick, and had long done nothing about it. That is a responsibility not only for the individual but also for the social order. Man can not be fully free until he is free from the gnawing anxieties of unmerited want.

(III). The third freedom in the Atlantic Charter is freedom from fear. This is commonly interpreted as freedom from war and the threat of war. Personal and national life will be subject to the recurrent menace of destruction unless we can evolve some stable world order, maintained by an effective power of legal enforcement. The League of Nations, as formed in 1918, was an attempt to frame such a stable world order; but the absence, in its formative years, of the United States and Russia, and the unwillingness of member States to assume police duties, or to accept curtailments of sovereignty, stultified its political activities from the first. Presently we shall have a second chance. The United Nations, with the Big Four (Russia, China the U.S.A., and the British Empire) as a mighty parallelogram of forces at their centre, will be in a position to plan a pacific world. The future of that world, in peace, as now in war, will depend in large measure on the mutual good will of these four and on their willingness to share in the common responsibilities of world rehabilitation, the feeding of starving populations, and the maintenance of world order by an international police-force. Yet the rights and interests of smaller nations must not be sacrificed to the power politics of the Big Four. The liberties of the Atlantic Charter are not a license for the strong to override the weak.

(IV). Fourth and last of the Atlantic Charter, freedom of worship—the assured freedom of religious faith to exercise a vital and controlling power in human life. From the political angle, this is not just a matter of the cold toleration of religion as a harmless but rather futile delusion on the part of some citizens. It is a national recognition of religion as the highest order of human experience; and it imposes on the believer the duty of using freedom of worship as an opportunity for actively making the will of God prevail.

Man is not merely an animal to be fed, clothed, and sheltered from the weather. Neither is man merely an economic organism to be adjusted to industrial development and guaranteed a fair share in the products of the industrial process. Man is a living soul with a spiritual destiny.

The first fundamental fact of the universe is the active existence of God—Jehovah, He Who Is— as the Mosaic record has it, and as St. Thomas Aquinas emphasizes in his Summa Theologica. The fact of the existence of that final Reality, spiritual not material, infinite not finite, eternal not temporal, purposeful not aimless, good not evil, brings with it a whole system of interrelated truths. Our own lives are spirit as well as matter. There are laws of the spiritual life for which we are made. Good and evil, virtue and sin, there are realities of experience, vouched for by the conscience of man. The ultimate nature of God, except His existence, is beyond our comprehension; yet by reason and revelation we apprehend something as to the spiritual laws of His universe. To these laws it should be our humble joy to conform, as the ordained principles of our being. The young Nazi believes blindly in the Fuhrer, and the political materialist surrenders his brain to the dogmas of Karl Marx; and the result for both is spiritual slavery. It is otherwise with those who seek with all their hearts to do the will of God, "Whose service is perfect freedom."

The transformation of human society into a finer, nobler thing will remain permanently impossible without the transformation of individual lives by the grace of God. The impulses of ancient evil are in every heart— impulses toward pride, envy, wrath, lust, sloth, gluttony, and avarice. As long as they prevail in our lives, no political construction however perfect, no system of education however noble, no environment however beautiful, can make our national life tolerable. The greatest of all prayers: Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth . . . must be embodied both in our legislation and in our lives. The true freedoms of the post-war order will be stultified and defeated, if we remain in chains to the enemy within our own hearts . . .

In the years that lie before us —years of almost certain confusion and painfulness of adjustment —it may be that demagogues will rise up to promise a brave new world through direct action under their leadership. Beware of such men. Freedom, like virtue, when once lost is hard to rehabilitate. It is our duty to help realize the will of God among men in greater justice, greater kindness, and a greater measure of human welfare. But the kingdom of love is not built by the sons of hate. Freedom is the inheritance of those who practice freedom. We must build upon rock, and not upon sand and blood.

ROSH HASHONAH GREETINGS

Weizmann Foresees An Internationalism Of Tolerance

By S. J. Woolf

Twenty-five years ago the Balfour Declaration was given to the world. It was in the form of a letter from the British Foreign Secretary to Lord Walter Rothschild. In it Arthur J. Balfour wrote: "His Majesty's Government view with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of that object."

That same day a British chemist of Russian birth, who had done much to help the Allied cause, heard the news in the Admiralty Laboratories. He forgot for the time being his test tubes and retorts, stopped his experiments and offered up thanks to God. His prayers had been answered and the only reward he had asked for his war work had been granted.

Disappointments and setbacks have come in the way of the full realization of Dr. Chaim Weizmann's hopes on that November day. Yet despite opposition and even bloodshed, Palestine has grown, and a half million immigrants ranging from penniless refugees to Nobel Prize winners have turned a more or less primitive country into "a land flowing with milk and honey."

Farm communities have prospered on arid plains through the application of irrigation. Tel Aviv, a city with modernistic buildings and a population of 175,000, has sprung up on what was a sand dune. There are hospitals, schools, a university and an institute for scientific research as well as large industrial enterprises. In addition, all the arts have flourished.

Now, once again Dr. Weizmann has been called upon to aid the Allied cause, and as Honorary Chemical Adviser to the British Ministry of Supply, he is carrying on his experiments in this country.

In 1915 he showed England how to make acetone, an essential in the manufacture of explosives. Lloyd George in his Memoirs wrote: "Dr. Weizmann with his discovery not only helped us to win the war, but made a permanent mark upon the map of the world." While once more his work may play a part in Allied success, it is this role as a map maker of which this chemist is proudest.

This was evident when I found him in the quiet of the Catskills. At heart he is a dreamer, as much a poet as a scientist. Despite his simplicity and almost childlike charm he has been classed by Viscount Robert Cecil as one of the greatest living statesmen. He is no great orator, but some of his speeches, often written in longhand in green ink, are real political tracts.

His manner is quiet and he is given to understatement. He shines in small circles rather than in crowds. Speak with him but a short time and you become convinced that his accomplishments in statecraft are the result of forthrightness rather than diplomacy. But behind his plain talk there is a note of mysticism. The old Talmudists must have been men such as he, a combination of common sense and poetic feeling.

In appearance, however, he is no bearded rabbi of old. There is much of the Slav in his face, and his resemblance to Lenin is so marked that at one conference he attended in Genoa the Italian po-

...ion guarded his hotel room thinking he was the Russian statesman.

Tired by overwork and harassed by the fear of the fate of his son, who as a member of the R.A.F. disappeared while on patrol duty over France, Dr. Weizmann was seeking some rest in a mountain retreat. But as head of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, an organization of Zionists and non-Zionists, he was in constant touch with assistants in New York and Washington.

In the last two decades Dr. Weizmann has developed a number of processes for supplying basic chemicals of war. His present research is secret, but he is reported to be working on synthetic rubber. And he looks to chemistry as an important factor in solving post-war problems.

"It will play a great part," he says, "in developing and making use of surplus agricultural products for vast industrial developments. It will also have to apply itself to the perfection of new vitamin-rich food-stuffs as a substitute for meats. This is essential for countries where the population is suffering from malnutrition and lack of those proteins which are especially adapted to the human digestive apparatus, and from too low a level of vitamins, most especially vitamin B1, which regulates the principle of the whole metabolism."

Dr. Weizmann was living in a cottage on the grounds of a large hotel. Blue placards, with the words "Private, Keep Out," not only on the gate but also on the front door, made me hesitate. But Dr. Weizmann had heard my car struggling up the steep hill, and opened the door himself while I still wondered what to do.

A big broad-shouldered man, he gives a first impression of shyness. Yet it did not take him long to settle himself in a large over-stuffed sofa before a fireplace and begin to talk about the subject nearest his heart.

Dr. Weizmann believes all the sufferings of the Jews are due to their lack of a homeland. He sees the Jewish question as a racial rather than a religious one. He regards Zionism as its only solution.

When I asked him why another nation should be established when the tendency after the war will be toward internationalism he replied:

"Do you truly believe that when peace finally comes the Americans, the British, the Russians or any other of the United Nations which is fighting to preserve its nationality will give it up? I do not want to prophesy, for there already have been too many Jewish prophets, but I am sure that the internationalism which is on the way will not eliminate nations. It will be an internationalism of tolerance, in which each nation will play its part so long as that part does not interfere with another nation."

There are many who believe that Zionism in reality helps Hitler's aims by advocating that the Jews be segregated and shipped off to Palestine. Dr. Weizmann brushes aside these arguments. He says, "Zionism does not advocate that all Jews should return to Palestine. There is no reason why those in America should do so unless they want to. They, however, can help provide a country for those who have none. Nor will a Jewish nation prevent Jews from becoming good citizens in other lands. America is made up of peoples from all over the earth. They may hold sentimental attachments for the countries from which they or their forefathers came, but this does not interfere with their being loyal Americans.

"Among all these settlers the Jews alone have no fatherland. For centuries they have been ghosts. A Jewish State in Palestine is a moral need, and it would be a decisive step toward normality and true emancipation."

Asked if Jews, like the followers of other religions, should not become a part of the countries in which they live, he countered with the question, "Can they?" And he continued, "It is true that in some countries there are no ghettos, but there are restrictions and prejudices excluding Jews from certain professions and businesses and compelling them to live in large cities. This lack of proper distribution and abnormal stratification breeds prejudice."

Years ago Mr. Balfour asked Dr. Weizmann if he thought that many Jews felt the way he did about Zionism.

The chemist replied: "The roads about Pinsk are lined with them."

It was near the town of Pinsk, in the village of Motele, that Chaim Weizmann was born sixty-eight years ago. As a child he heard of the atrocities and pogroms which the Russian Jews suffered. The proscriptions against his people compelled him to leave his own country in order to study chemistry. He attended the Universities of Freiburg and Berlin after he had been graduated from a school in his native village.

His first position was as a lecturer in Geneva, where he met his future wife, who was studying medicine there. In 1903 he was offered a lectureship at the University of Manchester, for even at that time he spoke not only Hebrew, Russian, German, French and Yiddish fluently but also English.

A couple of years after he went to Manchester he met Mr. Balfour, who was standing for a seat in the House of Commons from that city. At that time the college professor was already an ardent Zionist. England had suggested that the Jews should settle in an African colony, and the subject was discussed by the two men. Balfour favored the project, but the Zionist stood firm for Palestine.

"Suppose," he asked, "the English were to be offered Paris for London, do you think they would be satisfied?"

"We already have London," Balfour rejoined.

"But," said Weizmann, "the Jews had Jerusalem when London was only a marsh."

Weizmann says he little thought this conversation would make any impression upon Balfour, but when they again saw each other some ten years later in the office of the Foreign Secretary, the lean, lank, silver-haired Cabinet officer greeted his visitor with the remark:

"Well, Dr. Weizmann, you have changed little since we last met. Now I am happy to be able to grant the request you then made."

During those intervening years Weizmann had divided his time between chemistry and Zionism. He had become friendly with C. P. Scott, the editor of The Manchester Guardian, and when in 1916 the shortage of acetone became alarming Scott had suggested to Lloyd George, who was Minister of Munitions, that Weizmann might solve the difficulties.

Working day and night, Weizmann evolved a new method for making the required chemical and when Lloyd George suggested that he would recommend him for honors, Weizmann replied: "There is nothing I want for myself, but there is something I should like you to do for my people."

Shortly after Lloyd George became Prime Minister he discussed Palestine with Dr. Weizmann, and the result was the Balfour Declaration, and after the war, by a decree of the League of Nations, Palestine became a homeland for the Jews, under a mandate.

Dr. Weizmann established a home and a laboratory, in addition to those in London, at Rehoboth. Under his supervision experiments were at once begun for the utilization of citrus fruits and their waste products, and methods were sought for the production of needed materials from the oil residue of the Haifa refineries.

But difficulties arose. The Arabs objected to the newcomers. There were strikes and riots. Britain restricted Jewish immigration. Although Weizmann objected to many of the things that were done, some of the Zionists felt that he was pro-British. In 1931 he resigned from the leadership of the Jewish Agency, but within a few years he was recalled.

Dr. Weizmann fears that the position of the Jews will become more and more difficult.

"They will be a problem," he said. "That will tax the good-will and the energies of the countries of Eastern and Central Europe. Vast masses will have to find new homes and it is vain to hope that the countries in this hemisphere will welcome them. The hunted and disinherited will once more be faced with that age-old question 'Whither?'"

When the Arab question was mentioned as an obstacle to a peaceful Palestine, he said:

"I believe that this problem can be solved if a firm stand is taken. The Arabs must be told that the Jews will be encouraged to settle in Palestine and will control their own immigration. Those Jews who want to will be able to achieve their freedom and self-government by establishing a State of their own and ceasing to be a minority dependent upon the will and pleasure of other nations. In view of the strategic as well as the economic importance of Palestine, its inclusion in the British Commonwealth would be of interest to both."

Interrupted to ask if he did not think that the Arabs had as much claim to Palestine as the Jews, and would it not be possible for that land to remain a spiritual homeland for Jews, Mohammedans and Christians without the necessity for a political and physical possession.

"Historically Palestine is a Jewish land. Moreover, the Jews' claim to it is reinforced by the solemn promise of fifty-two nations. But nothing should interfere with the rights and position of the Arabs at present in Palestine. The Arabs will control their own affairs, and if Palestine is fully developed there is ample room for Arabs and Jews.

"In the countries under the Nazi heel we must wear the Star of David as a badge of shame. But it stands for something else to us. It means martyrdom and suffering patiently and unresentfully borne. But it also stands for hope that, when the war has ended, it will shine unvanished over Zion's gates."

THE WORK OF THE UNITED JEWISH REFUGEE AND WAR RELIEF AGENCIES

similar project undertaken to feed the population of Greece, in regard to the Jews in the ghettos.

Not very much progress has been made as far as emigration of Polish Jewish refugees from Russia is concerned. The U.S.S.R. Government does not permit the emigration of these refugees even though they are Polish citizens according to our concept of matters. The same applies to the refugees of the Baltic States. Then there is the problem of sending food. Attempts have been made to send food from the Middle East but there are some possibilities of shipping food from India and Egypt to Russia, and individual parcels are being sent to the refugees there. Presently we have lists of those refugees with their Russian addresses; thus contact between the refugees and their relatives on this continent has been established.

C) POST-WAR PLANNING

The U.J.R. activities in this direction are being coordinated in conjunction with the Congress Bureau of Social and Economic Research. The literature and plans of the chief Jewish agencies (the American Jewish Congress' Institute of Jewish Affairs and the Bureau of the American Jewish Committee) are available to us, and have been examined. The U.J.R. is about to prepare a dossier on Jewish settlement in Canada since 1896-7 in order to have available a factual study which will answer the thesis of this Committee. The U.J.R. was instrumental in having the Canadian Government offer certain facilities for the ORT training schools (first in an internee-camp, then in Montreal).

In conclusion I would like to quote from the U.J.R. address to the 5th Dominion Council Plenary Session:

"This is not only a humanitarian task, it is a holy task. The fact that it is sacred work will enable us to lose sight of its multitudinous aspects: the collection of funds from the Jewish people of this continent to save those tragically placed."

Saves MONEY IN CONSTRUCTION

Because it builds and insulates at the same time . . . with only one material and labour cost . . . Donnacona saves money in building. Remember, too, Donnacona insulation will sharply cut fuel bills. Versatile Donnacona has many advantages but, above all, it is a thrifty building material.

Louis Lesserson, stellar member of the Leslie Campbell Agency, Montreal, of Occidental Life Insurance Company, has recently received notification of his qualification for the Life Insurance Million Dollar Round Table.

This distinction requires the production of one million dollars of new business in one year. Mr. Lesserson, who lives in Toronto, achieved this requirement for Round Table Honors in only seven months. He also qualified for membership in Occidental's select Leading Producers Club (minimum requirement being $15,000 in premiums within 12 months) in only 10 months.

He was honored last month by Vice President V. H. Jenkins who, while visiting Toronto on a tour of agencies, presented Mr. Lesserson with the watch awarded by the Company emblematic of Leading Producers Club membership.

CLEAN shoes last longer

Good for the lad who cleans his shoes! He is lengthening the life of those shoes you buy him, because dirt and mud eat into the leather. A good shoe cream or polish, too, will protect and preserve that leather, keep it soft and pliable.

In the cleaning of white shoes, may we suggest that if you should favor a liquid cleaner, you follow it with an application of white shoe cream to help keep the leather firm yet soft.

● All hopes for the future lie in our having something at last built up — something upon which to build more.

Twenty-five years of achievement lie behind. The first Federations of philanthropic organizations in the Dominion of Canada, with other important Jewish welfare agencies, now enter upon an era that will teach that all life is worth saving, and that mercy is the highest attribute of man. Remember, and be well persuaded of this truth: The future of Canadian Jewry is not in the hands of Fate, but in ours. The problems of today and tomorrow demand the highest qualities of thought and character. Success can be won only by wisdom, knowledge, willingness for sacrifice, and the strongest possible sense of social justice and obligation.

MARRIAGES

Stotland-Torchin

The marriage of Miss Rosalind Torchin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Torchin, 514 Pratt Avenue, to Joseph Stotland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stotland, 5188 Esplanade Avenue, took place at Beth David Synagogue on June 27, at half-past four o'clock, Rabbi S. Hershorn officiating, assisted by Cantor F. Schlepack. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her floor-length dress was of ivory slipper-satin, with a high, heart-shaped neckline and long sleeves coming to points over the wrists. The bodice was princess-cut on basque lines, with a yoke of lace embroidered in seed pearls over the sleeves and hands, and the gathered skirt fell into a long full train. The bride's headdress was a chou of tulle, caught by a cluster of seed pearls, with the veil falling along the length of the train, and her cascade bouquet was of white carnations, sweetpeas, and bouvardia. Miss Sari Ginsberg, in rose, and Ethel Rabinovitch, in deep lavender, were maids of honor. Their dresses were of silk marquisette, each cut with a sweetheart neckline, tight-fitting bodice, on the same style as the bride's, and a full skirt extending into a slight train. Miss Ginsberg had a rose tulle headdress, with large draped rose and lavender feathers. Miss Rabinovitch's headdress, of deep lavender tulle, was trimmed the same way. They carried cascade bouquets of multi-colored sweetpeas. The bridesmaids were Misses Helen Steinman, in green; Rhoda Blank, in peach; Faye Shore, in pink; Sylvia Stanton, in pale blue; Miriam Miller, in peach; Beatrice Rosenstein, in lavender; Gertrude Mintz, in fuchsia; and Etta Segal, in green. Their dresses were cut like those of the maids of honor; they wore headdresses of multi-colored flowers, and each carried a white shepherd's crook, decorated with a cluster of spring flowers tied with a large satin bow. As the bride and maids of honor walked up the aisle, the bridesmaids joined their shepherd's crooks to form an arch. An arch was also formed for the complete bridal party as they walked down the aisle after the ceremony. Miss Claire Klepper, cousin of the bride, was flower girl, in orchid point d'esprit, styled like the bridesmaids' gowns. Her Marie Antoinette hat of point d'esprit was hand-embroidered in tiny rosettes, and she carried a colonial bouquet of roses, carnations, and sweetpeas. I. Stotland, brother of the groom, was best man. Theodore Torchin, brother of the bride, was ring-bearer, in a Lord Fauntleroy suit. The synagogue was decorated in tall standards of pink and white peonies and gladioli. "Because" was sung. The reception was held in the Jewish People' School auditorium, which was decorated with pink and white peonies. At the head table there was a three-tiered wedding cake, and a centrepiece on each side of pink roses, white carnations, and baby's breath. Mrs. Torchin wore a blush-rose crepe dress, with a hand-embroidered, tight-fitting bodice, an accordion-pleated skirt falling into a short train, and a white straw hat with rose veiling. Her corsage was of white carnations and rose sweetpeas. Mrs. Stotland wore a blue crepe dress, with a hand-embroidered fitted bodice, a full skirt with a slight train, and a pale blue hat with navy veiling and navy accessories. Her corsage was of pale blue sweetpeas and white carnations. The bride couple left for New York, the bride travelling in a brown tailored gabardine suit, with a paddy-green blouse and hat, brown accessories, and corsage of orchids and lilies-of-the-valley. Mr. and Mrs. Stotland are living at 514 Pratt Avenue.

Handman-Berger

The marriage of Miss Anne Handman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Handman, 615 Champagneur Avenue, to Cpl. Saul Zusman, R.C.A.S., son of A. Zusman, Durocher Avenue, and the late Mrs. Rose Zusman, took place at the Spanish Room of the Queen's Hotel, on Sunday, September 12, at half past two o'clock, Rabbi Julius Berger officiating. The bride was given away by her father. She wore a floor-length gown of white Chantilly lace cut on princess lines, with a Peter Pan scalloped collar, long sleeves coming to points over the wrists, a tight-fitting bodice buttoned down the front, and a full skirt ending in a three-yard fan-shaped train. Her headdress was in Spanish style, worked out in lilies-of-the-valley, and her five-yard tulle veil extended over her train. She carried a white prayer book, with streamers of white orchids and white baby's breath. Miss Freda Handman, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, wearing baby blue taffeta, made with a sweetheart neckline, long, tight-fitting bodice, and a full skirt. Her headdress and veil were of blue tulle, and she carried a nosegay of roses. Maurice Handman, brother of the bride, was best man. On each side of the canopy the altar was decorated with ferns and gladioli, and the aisles were marked in ribbon. Wedding music was played and "Because" was sung. The reception was held at the Queen's Hotel, each table being decorated with ferns and roses. Mrs. Handman wore a black silk suit trimmed with black sequins, a black hat and black accessories, and a corsage of red roses. The groom's sister, Mrs. A. Goldman, gave him away. She wore a navy blue crepe dress, with accessories to match, and a corsage of red roses. The couple spent their honeymoon in Ste. Agathe, and Quebec City, the bride travelling in a beige two-piece suit trimmed with brown velvet and accessories to match. They will live in Montreal. Out-of-town guests present were H. Leiberman, I. Rosenbloom, Mr. and Mrs. H. Schwartz, and Samuel Sugarman, all of New York; Mr. and Mrs. V. Waldman and sons, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. A. Goldman, of Quebec; and Miss Maica Stone of Ottawa.

Feldman-Rosenstein

The marriage of Miss Sadye Rosenstein, daughter of Mrs. G. Rosenstein, 65 St. Joseph Boulevard West, and the late Gedalia Rosenstein, to Joseph Feldman, son of Mrs. W. Feldman, and Mr. Feldman, of Vienna, took place at Beth David Synagogue on September 12, at half past two o'clock, Rabbi S. Hershorn officiating, assisted by Cantor F. Schlepack. The bride was given away by her mother, and brother, Louis Rosenstein. She wore a full-length gown of white satin and tulle, made with heart-shaped neckline, long sleeves coming to points at the wrists, a fitted satin bodice, and a full tulle skirt. Her headdress of white gladioli was caught with veiling, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white gladioli. The matron of honor, Mrs. Harry Rosenstein, sister-in-law of the bride, wore a gown with a heaven blue bodice and full white chiffon skirt, a skull cap with matching veil, and carried a nosegay of pink roses. The best man was Harry Rosenstein, brother of the bride. The groom was given away by Mr. and Mrs. Abe Liverant, the latter wearing a gown of black crepe, with matching hat, and a corsage of red roses. The page boy was Mervyn Rosenstein, the bride's nephew, in full dress suit. Ferns decorated the altar. "Because" was sung. The reception was held in the community hall of the synagogue, where the tables were decorated with gladioli candles, and a wedding cake. The bride's mother received in a gown of black lace, with matching hat, and a corsage of red roses. The couple left on their honeymoon cruise and will stop at Murray Bay. The bride wore for travelling a Kelly green wool dress, mink jacket, and matching accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Feldman will live at 65 St. Joseph Boulevard West.

MARBLE AND TILE WORK

On The Beaches of Dieppe, Victoria and Laval

AMONG the Canadians who lie in honored graves in Sicily is Gunner William Rosenthal of the Royal Canadian Artillery, who was twenty last February, a Montrea'er, and for a year or two a valued worker for the Canadian Press. In a letter written short'y before his death he said: "No price is too great to pay, no life too precious, to enforce our beliefs and ideals", the ideals of a society in which "institutions of culture and learning and education are respected and upheld and supported."

Gunner Rosenthal, like a number of his fellow Jewish-Canadian youths of Montreal and Toronto and Winnipeg who now lie in similar graves around the Mediterranean or at Dieppe or wherever the broken wings of their airplanes dropped them in their flights against the tyrant, was a personal friend of members of the staff of this journal. It is therefore with considerable bitterness that we contemplate the fact that if he and they could return to their homeland today they would find themselves subjected to mob attacks in villages like Plage Laval in the province of Quebec and obliged to read articles telling them to keep out of summer resorts in the province of Manitoba. The Victoria Beach, Man., Herald printed last week an article headed "UNWANTED PEOPLE: A Reminder to Property Owners and Rental Agents", and saying: "Remember, you have an obligation to see to it that those unwanted people who have overrun beaches on the other side of Lake Winnipeg are not permitted to buy or rent here."

There is a step between the methods of Plage Laval and the methods of Victoria Beach, but it is only a step. And there is an excuse for Plage Laval which is not an excuse for Victoria Beach. The hoodlums of Plage Laval have been taught for a long time that the war in which Gunner Rosenthal died is not their war, and that the "beliefs and ideals" for which he died are not their ideals, not the ideals of the province of Quebec which is to them their only country. The editor of the Victoria Beach Herald can hardly have been taught anything like that. He, and the property-owners to whom he addresses himself, must have received their education in the ordinary, province-supervised schools of the English-speaking parts of this Dominion. They must have learned the history of British freedom. They must have some knowledge of the methods by which Naziism was established in Germany. For the hoodlums of Plage Laval we are disposed to bear in mind the historic utterance (of a Jew), "they know not what they do." But when we think of the fine young Canadian Jews who have died to protect the people of Victoria Beach from becoming the victims of German kultur we find it hard to feel so forgiving towards the Herald.

The Canadian Jewish Congress is grateful to the Toronto Saturday Night for permission to reproduce as an advertisement the above editorial which appeared in its columns on September 4th, 1943.

Combined Jewish Appeal For $583,000, September 20-28

Combined Jewish Appeal for $583,000 includes for the first time United Jewish Camps, needing $25,000. In this year's campaign, drive officials stress the need for oversubscription by at least 20 percent, to compensate for increased cost of commodities and services that all the institutions are faced with in the operation of their welfare services. This is especially true for the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies and the Jewish General Hospital. Demands for assistance have not lessened from those who need the Federation for support. The Jewish General Hospital is operating at peak, with heavy demands for out-patient service. It is reported that 250,000 patients have passed through out-door clinics since the hospital was opened nine years ago. In addition over 70 per cent of the patients treated there can only pay part, if any, of their hospital charges. Over 500 volunteer workers organized in the Zone Division under the leadership of Louis Herman, assisted by 28 Control Chairmen, have been engaged in the colossal task of canvassing approximately 4500 subscribers and donors, in the campaign from September 20 to September 28. Phil Garfinkle is 1943 Chairman of the Combined Jewish Appeal. Control chairmen of zones: Gaston Albright, Sam Black, Gordon Brown, R. Cummings, Ben Deutsch, S. Fargeon Irving Freeman, E. T. Garfinkle, Samuel Greenblatt, J. Guttman, Harry Hemsman, Myer Hyman, Harold Lande, A. Lang, Leo Levitt, Larry L. Malinoff, S. Lipson, Sam. Paperman, Harry Pencer, Louis Rubinstein, Max Seigler, Sam. 189 U. S. Rabbis Are Chaplains

Mrs. S. Yaphe, Zone Chairman of the Women's Division of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, one of the six groups united in the Combined Jewish Appeal.

Harold S. Freeman, District Chairman of the Zone Division of the Combined Jewish Appeal.

Max Jacobson, District Chairman of the Zone Division of the Combined Jewish Appeal.

Rabbi Leon Wolf Rosenberg, the first Jewish chaplain to serve with the Marine Corps, reported for duty at a West Coast station, it was announced at the office of the Army and Navy Committee of the Jewish Welfare Board, 330 Fifth Avenue, New York.

"Heretofore Jewish service men in the Marines have been served by either Navy chaplains or civilian rabbis in communities adjacent to Marine Corps bases," said the announcement.

"Chaplain Rosenberg's appointment brings the number of rabbis serving with the armed forces up to 189, of whom twenty-five are in the Navy. A Jewish chaplain also is on duty with the merchant marine."

Rabbi Rosenberg left the Sons of Israel Congregation in Cliffside, N.J., to volunteer for service.

The Jewish Book Council of America has designated the period from November 20th through December 19th as Jewish Book Month. The aim of the Council is to promote interest in Jewish books in the English, Hebrew and Yiddish languages.

Z. O. A. Convention Pleads For Palestine

The annual convention of the Zionist Organization of America adopted, at Columbus, Ohio, a resolution appealing to the leaders of the United Nations to "initiate discussions with the Jewish Agency for Palestine, the internationally recognized spokesman for the Jewish people," to determine the role of Palestine in meeting the needs of the disposed masses of the Jewish people.

It called for securing the rightful place of a Jewish Commonwealth in a post-war world based upon the Four Freedoms and the Atlantic Charter.

Demanding "the immediate termination of the policies of the Palestine Administration, which have been hostile to the upbuilding of the Jewish National Home," the resolution asked for "the abrogation of the White Paper of 1939 and the opening of the gates of Palestine under the control and direction of the Jewish Agency."

It further declared that "in the rebuilding of the Jewish Commonwealth we pledge full regard for the religious, linguistic and cultural rights of the Arab population of Palestine, and the civil and religious equality of its inhabitants before the law" and that "the inviolability of the holy places of the various religions would be guaranteed."

American Jews were urged to preserve and safeguard the unity of American Israel achieved at the Jewish Conference, and an appeal was made for "the mobilization of American public opinion for the attainment of our just demands."

Emphasizing the "unparalleled tragedy that has overtaken the Jews of Nazi-occupied Europe," another resolution voiced that "the United Nations have not to date initiated a program of rescue commensurate with the magnitude of the catastrophe."

The United Nations were asked to provide the political, technical and financial instrumentalities for the transfers of the maximum number of Jewish refugees into Palestine, the one country where they will find an immediate haven and a permanent home."

Still another resolution condemned the American Council for Judaism for "its disruptive work" and the "divisive activities of those men who speak for no one but themselves."

Louis Lipsky, of New York, former president of the Zionist Organization of America, in an address at a political session, accused the Palestine Administration of "excluding Jewish victims of the war from the Promised Land" and of apparently looking to postwar "implementation of the invalid White Paper."

He also charged that the Jewish Agency for Palestine was being "ignored and oppressed" and that "the structure of cooperative economy, created by Jewish labor, is being supplemented by Government institutions in which Jews are to be allowed to play no part."

In "An Open Address to Roosevelt and Churchill" Dr. Jacob Heller of Cincinnati, re-elected chairman of the National Zionist Administrative Council, asserted that "at least 90 to 98 per cent of the Jews of the United States do believe that there can be no adequate solution of the Jewish problem, in either the material or spiritual sense without Palestine," and added:

"We ask you to fit Palestine into the plans of a better world, and this war, to insist that it shall be regarded in the light of international pledges and of international justice."

NAME OF EISENHOWER INSCRIBED

The name of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will be inscribed in the Sefer Ha'Zahav, the Jewish people's roll of honor in Jerusalem, as a salute to the commander of the Allied forces in North Africa, the Jewish National Fund announced. The fund cabled its decision upon receipt of the news of Italy's unconditional surrender.

The Sefer Ha'Zahav, on the pages of which the names of the world's outstanding scientists, statesmen and military leaders of modern times have been inscribed in recognition of their achievements, is being preserved in Jerusalem. The fund said that the news of the unconditional surrender resulted in the receipt of many gifts.

MARRIAGES

Mosoff - Whyne

The marriage of Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Whyne, 181 Montrose Avenue, to Leading Aircraftsman Philip Mosoff, R.C.A.F., son of Mrs. Anne Mosoff, 423 Palmerston Boulevard, and the late Jack Mosoff, took place in the garden of Chudleigh House, on September 2, at half past six o'clock, Rabbi A. Kelman officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of white satin was fashioned with a fitted bodice extending into a full skirt, and her finger-tip veil of tulle illusion fell from a lace halo. She carried a white prayer book covered with orchids and streamers of baby's breath. Miss Rivy Ourin, as maid of honor, wore a street-length dress of rose crepe, the top fashioned like that of the bride's with the skirt of accordion-pleated sheer with apron front. Her headdress was a halo of rose velvet with shoulder-length veil, and she carried a bouquet of cream roses with gold streamers. The bridesmaids were Misses Rose Chelin, Ruth Rakoff, and Belle Krestell, all in blue crepe fashioned like that of the maid of honor, with matching headdresses, and carried nosegays of red roses. Leading Aircraftsman Bernard Mosoff, R.C.A.F., twin brother of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were: Leading Aircraftsman Harold Mosoff, R.C.A.F., Bernard Ludwig, and Captain Irwin Blackstone, C.O.T.C. Gladioli decorated the canopy, and other flowers bordered the aisles. Miss Evelyn Gold sand "Because." The bride's mother received in a black accordion-pleated, full-length skirt with salmon coloured lace top, and corsage of red roses. The groom's mother wore a black, full-length skirt, with silver lame top, and corsage of red roses. The couple left on a wedding trip to New York, and will live at 423 Palmerston Boulevard. For travelling the bride wore a pale blue tailored suit, with hat of the same material, pale blue topcoat with blue fox collar, and brown accessories. Out-of-town guests were Miss Minerva Goldstein, of New York; and Mr. and Mrs. S. Shankman, of Los Angeles, Cal

Jewish Women Are Among Russian Fighters

Lieut. Lily Litvak, a Russian Jewish airwoman, recently shot down her sixth German 'plane.

Some time ago she was wounded in a combat with a Junkers 88, but she carried on with the fight until she sent the enemy crashing. That was her fifth victory. After this combat, however, she was taken to hospital where she was detained for several months.

On her discharge, she returned to her squadron, and very shortly afterwards was sent with them on a bombing raid behind the enemy lines. Several German aeroplanes suddenly appeared from behind some cloud. A fight immediately ensued, in the course of which Lily brought down her sixth 'plane.

Fanny Rabinovitch, a forty-six-year-old tailor, has won distinction as a guerrilla fighter. She first attracted attention a year ago when she carried out a daring mission, in which she saved eight Jews from the Nazis. She wandered for several days through forests and villages with the eight Jews, and finally brought them safely to her detachment.

Since then she has taken part in many partisan operations, helping to derail trains and blow up enemy ammunition dumps. She is now in hospital recovering from wounds received in action. This fighting tailoress intends to return to her guerrilla comrades when she is fit.

Krasnaya Zvezda, the central organ of the Red Army, has published a number of stories of gallantry by guerrilla fighters in the Orel area during the present offensive, mentioning a number of Jewish partisans, including a woman named Sonia who displayed outstanding courage.

Raie Goldreich, a twenty-year-old Jewish girl, who before the war was a student of the German language and literature, has been awarded the title of Lieutenant in recognition of her work in interrogating captured German officers.

It was she who questioned Lieut.-General Moritz von Drebber, who was captured with Field-Marshal von Paulus at Stalingrad.

Music Director, Once Of Berlin, Dies In New York

Dr. Oskar Guttmann, who was music director of the Oranienburger Strasse Temple, the largest synagogue in Berlin from 1929 to 1938, and for the last three years music director of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, 2 West Seventieth Street, New York, died at his residence, 165 West Eighty-third Street. He was born in Bring, Silesia, June 16, 1880.

Dr. Guttmann's oratorio, "Bereshith," based on the first chapter of Genesis, was performed in Berlin and later over the radio in Jerusalem and by the Jewish Choral Society of New York. He also composed much music for Friday evening Jewish services and was the founder and conductor of the Shearith Israel Choral Group, which gave its first performance three months ago. With Leon Kirchner, his predecessor as music director, he had been compiling and editing the traditional melodies of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue.

Dr. Guttmann leaves a widow, Paula Joseph Guttmann, voice teacher and pianist, and a son, Alfred, composer and arranger, who is at Camp Phillips, Kan.

Elisha Tcherikower, 68, noted Jewish historian and one of the founders of the Yiddish Scientific Institute, died from a heart attack while vacationing at Palenville, New York. He was the author of a number of historic works on Jewry's life in the Ukraine and France.

Pilot, Home Safe, Was In 25 Forays

Recently returned home after participating in twenty-five European raids of the United States Eighth Air Force as a bomber pilot, First Lieut. Bertram H. Kaplan enthusiastically praised both his own force and the R.A.F. and related one of his more thrilling experiences.

The holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters, the 23-year-old flier, who was born in New York, said that his Flying Fortress was named "Patches" because, on a raid over the U-boat base at St. Nazaire, France, it was so shot up that about 200 patches were required to repair it.

The raid was the third in which Lieutenant Kaplan took part, he said at his home, 630 Middle Neck Road, Great Neck, L.I., where he lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Kaplan. On that mission, he said, the flak belt over the target was so heavy that exploding shells formed a solid black cloud.

"I never saw flak so heavy," he declared. "Four Fortresses right ahead of us were hit and went down." His ship was riddled, he continued, the navigator, Lieut. Norman R. Pilote, of Waltman, Mass., was wounded and the radio man, Sergeant Robert Grinslade of Tulsa, Okla., suffered an appendicitis attack. One of the motors caught fire. Four German fighters "ripped in like lightning," went on Lieutenant Kaplan. "I could hear our guns in back, and knew they were hitting us on the tail. The radio operator, disregarding his great pain, manned his hatch gun."

"After that our ship was called 'Patches.' When they fixed it up they painted the patches white. There were about 200 of them." He added that Lieutenant Pilote and Sergeant Grinslade both recovered, the latter having been operated upon as soon as the plane returned to England.

Lieutenant Kaplan took part in raids over Kiel, Bremen and Wilhelmshaven, Germany, over the Low Countries, Paris and other parts of France. He said that the Americans and R.A.F. fliers were doing "great" work and that the British people were very hospitable to the Americans. He was never wounded or shot down.

He arrived Aug. 24 for a twenty-day leave and expects to train pilots in the U.S. He is single and not engaged, he said. Temple Beth-El, of which he is a member, was the scene of a homecoming celebration and special service in his honor.

War and Peace

HUMAN NEEDS go on

● War or no war, babies come into the world without a name, and need care and protection.

Mothers who go out to work by the day still need a day nursery where their children can play safely.

Boys and girls, with all their problems, still need leadership, recreation for their leisure time, counselling in the time of their difficulties.

When death, sickness or desertion threatens to break up family life, the skill of a friendly trained social worker is urgently needed.

The handicapped and the aged — these are our responsibility, too. So are the wives and children of Toronto's uniformed men, when in need of help and advice. They must not be let down.

There's always a need for friendship, for education, for human welfare, for the building of good citizen-
